ALTOGETHER NOW!

Hate to be corny, but this seems completely appropriate: There's a new kid in town. Things aren't going to be quite as they have been. Yes, I'm referring to Nintendo 64 and its affect on the video games market.
Question is, does the new arrival dictate that we shall squeeze in and make room, or could our community grow to something marvellous in ways none can predict? Obviously my hopes are on the latter case scenario insofar as an exciting gaming environment goes. In terms of the magazine, space is about to become more precious for a little while. But, as ever, CVG's main aim is to maintain fair representation for all gaming platforms. We are not here to champion any in particular. What we want to represent, and what we hope you read CVG for, is the bigger picture. Enjoy the mag! PAUL DAVIES

NINTENDO 64 IN 'CHEAPER TO BUY ONE OVER THERE' SHOCK!

With the whole world now paying for the most powerful games system on the planet, most UK gamers are weighing up whether to buy an import machine or wait for the (eventual) UK launch. Unfortunately, it looks like the bare minimum charged for a machine plus Mario and Pilot Wings will be well over £1000. With that much moolah to burn, may we suggest actually going over there yourself and bagging one? Hey, we're serious about this; to such an extent that we've prepared a list of approximate flight costs to the Land of the Rising Sun! What are you waiting for?!

- OPTION 1 - Approximately £516, using Aeroflot via Moscow
- OPTION 2 - Approximately £668, using Alitalia via Rome.
- OPTION 3 - Approximately £843, using Korean Airlines via Seoul.
- OPTION 4 - Approximately £930, using Virgin Airways direct.

Once landed, collect your baggage, check in at the Shiba Park Hotel (£75 per night), wander 7 minutes down the road to the 'Toy Park' games store; hand over your £157 (N64), £61 (games), £7 (memory pak) and return home. The cost? Around £950 inclusive of the Aeroflot Flight, food, and the plush hotel where Paul stayed last November!! So the choice is yours; buy from "Honest Frank's Video Emporium", or fly to Japan RIGHT NOW... (See Free Play for the latest N64 import prices)

If you fancy staying much closer to where the main stores are likely to stock a machine, plus games, plus leads, plus just about everything else
you could crave,
Akihabara is the place to be. It's not as glamorous as Shiba, mind. But you don't care about that, right.
Anyway here are some hotels in that district you might want to try for sushi:

The Akihabara
Washington: 10600
Yen (£65) per night.

Hotel Friend: 7500
Yen (£46) per night.

Silver Inn:
6800 Yen (£42)

Bear in mind these are single rooms prices.
Hey, you don't have to take this seriously!

WHAT IT ALL MEANS

5... EXCELLENT

4... VERY GOOD

3... GOOD

2... PRETTY BAD

1... VERY POOR

Makes the hairs on the back of your neck stand on end!
Whenever the High Five is lit, you know this game is essential.

Outstanding quality. Only minor limitations prevent this game from being an all-round 'must have'. Among the best money can buy for your machine.

These games may not be innovative, or fall into everybody's notion of ideal. They are either well produced examples of common concepts, or slightly flawed workings of originality. But they are definitely worth looking at.

There's something fundamentally wrong with the mechanics, or the presentation lets the game down (ie it's in a foreign language). Could still keep some people happy, but we can't wholeheartedly recommend it.

An all-round loser: We're depressed by it. The company responsible are embarrassed by it. And you could really get by a lot better without it.

Never to return, we might add. Yes Tom Cox gave CVG the elbow, after he found out how much better it would be to work free-lance: More money, more sunshine, and more time with his mis-sus. "Thass the honest trufe guv", he told Paul, "Ssnott anyffing to do with 'aving ta work late and for no money... and BEING TOLD WHAT TO DO BY A BUNCH OF IDIOTS WHO WOULDN'T KNOW A DEADLINE FROM A DEAD ARM..." And so it went on, until Paul asked quietly for help.

Magic. You could see it light up his eyes - all bright, and fiery like. It happened when the sun came out. Some might tell you the apparition is only a reflection, but we know better. It's as though Tom's monumental performance on CVG last issue touched the very heart of Mother Nature herself. If Summer continues to be as beautiful and warm as it has been, you know who to thank. Jaime's got this Acting Art Editor lark off to a tee. You can't tell by looking at him, it's when he opens his mouth to speak that's the key. Why it's as if Tom Cox hadn't abandoned his position in the first place. Now, instead of saying "Please may I have the day off", Jaime barks "I'm not comin' in tom-morah! AWRIGHT!" Uncanny. Next month we're going to make him Acting Phil Dawson, so we can double the amount of insurance claims on broken equipment.

HThe reason for not printing an actual picture of Phil last month (we used Paul wearing a horror mask in case you hadn't noticed) is because... well see for yourself. This time a few weeks ago the man didn't even have a scalp. At least now that's grown back we can show you Phil's head without being sued by the Obscene Publications Bureau. Apart from running the top of his head through a saw mill, Dawson has only accounted for 3.48% of all world disasters this month.

VF3 NEW CHARACTER! ANOTHER PS PRICE DROP!

Virtua Fighter 3

NEW CHARACTER

At the recent Tokyo Toy Show Sega unveiled the second new VF3 character, to join the beautiful but deadly female Aoi Umenokouji. Sumo Takarashi once again observes a distinct Japanese style, though there are still no details about his background story or how he'll use his Sumo skills. We suspect he probably has a modified Sumo technique to balance his performance against other fighters. Mr Yu Suzuki talked enthusiastically about the new addition to a select audience.

Just to remind you of the astounding quality of movement we can expect from Takarashi, dictated by the power of the Model 3 board: His ceremonial apron (Kesho-mawashi) is made of silk, so will ripple just like the real thing. Just like Jeffry, the musculature of this highest ranked Sumo wrestler (Yokozuna Rikishi) will tense and swell to mimic a real body almost perfectly. Yes, VF3 is that amazing.

CHARACTER PROFILE

NAME: Takarashi

SEX: Male

AGE: 27

BLOOD-TYPE: O

WEIGHT: approx. 200kg

HEIGHT: approx. 2m

FIGHT-STYLE: Sumo

NATIONALITY: Japanese

OCCUPATION: Sumo Wrestler

TITUS BEGIN N64 DEVELOPMENT

French software developers Titus have recently been chosen to produce a game for Nintendo 64. While nobody knows the exact nature of the project yet, it is said to be following similar guidelines of all N64 development – promotion of the 3D stick for revolutionary gameplay features, and the speed advantage of cartridge over CD. The comments of Eric Caen, co-founder and R&D team manager of Titus, offer further testament to the power of N64: "After researching next generation technology, we hoped that the Nintendo 64 would reach the same performance level as the $100 000 SGI Indigo2 High Impact workstation. Indeed it has."

▲The $100 000 Indigo2 High Impact workstation. Titus claim Nintendo 64 is capable of equalling its performance.

SONY DROP PS PRICE YET AGAIN!!!

In an effort to match the success of Flash Saturn in Japan, Sony have repackaged and lowered the price of PlayStation. At the new low price of 19 800 Yen (£120), buyers get one controller, with a lead extended by 2 meters. Otherwise there is no difference in the design of the machine. At a special 'PlayStation Party', Sony celebrated sales of over 500, 000 units – which, they claim, is what enabled the 10 000 Yen price cut. Prepare for another PS price drop in the UK before Christmas.

MEGA DRIVE SOFT ON TAP

Sega is to establish a cool new service in co-operation with one of the world's largest cable communications companies – Flextech plc – in August. Called Sega Channel, the thinking behind it is that there are over two million Mega Drive owners in the UK, many of who might appreciate unlimited access to a regularly updated library of 25 games for £9.95 per month? These titles are updated month on month, with the most popular games being kept on to keep regular users happy.

Games are downloaded into a special Mega Drive adaptor where they are stored until replaced by another, or the console is switched off. There are five categories of games: The Arcade (X-Men, Batman Returns, Ranger-X); Strategy Room (Shining Force, Thor); Family Room (Flicky, Garfield); Sports Arena (Striker, California Games); and The Speedway (Outrun, G-Loc). Those are just some examples of those that will be available. The most promising feature of Sega Channel is that preview versions of games will become available before they are on sale. So you could be playing top titles such as Sonic 3D at least a month before anyone else. Telewest Communications plc are the first supporters of the service in the UK, after being very happy with trials held in Essex and Kent. So expect to be paid a visit from their sales rep soon!

SEGA DROP HARRIER JET ON TROCADERO!!!

In case you'd forgotten, Sega are opening Segaworld this August in London's Trocadero (big entertainment centre). Segaworld will be the largest indoor theme park on the planet, and this Harrier Jump Jet – the first ex-RAF Jump Jet in commercial use – will hang from the ceiling of the Flight Deck zone there. The Harrier was towed through London on the back of the world's largest bungee tower, hence the gag with the policeman arresting Sonic for 'ultra-low flying'. Snarfle. By the way, 1996 is the 30th anniversary of the launch of the Harrier.

Ere, Sonic! You're nicked son! Right, now how do we get off this thing? HELP!

SEGA SATURN UNTOLD POTENTIAL

When you see the shots of Saturn Fighting Vipers we have for you this month, you will be amazed. It seems the new Sega Graphics Library (SGL 2.1) is pulling tricks out of the Saturn that even the world's leading software developers are stunned to find. Most notably Squaresoft who, as you know, recently shunned Nintendo to concentrate on PlayStation development (Final Fantasy VII, and Tobal No.1)

A representative of Squaresoft LA, Mr Han Lee, posted an excited message on the Internet recently, detailing a private demonstration of the new Windows 95 hosted Saturn development environment, and SGL 2.1, which took place behind the scenes at E3. Here's what he saw:

"a demo driving game, sort of like Gran Chaser [Cyber Speedway] that had a real-time Gouraud shaded lighting and ran at 60 frames per second. In a tunnel scene, there were actually real-time generated light casting from the tunnel windows onto the walls."

"VF2 Akira with real-time Gouraud shaded lighting."

"3D Sonic doing Fighting Sonic moves on Saturn. What was so impressive about this was that the entire process took place click-and-drop easy."

Sega Europe quizzed their Japanese counterparts about this information, and were told that the content was accurate. So to fan the flames of desire even more, we'll leave you with this final comment from Han Lee:

"One of the senior programmers of Square Japan recently told me that Saturn has several undocumented DSPs that Sega never released any information about. If this is indeed true, we still haven't seen half the potential of what the Saturn can really do!"

[QUAKE]

We're up to the sixth installment of our 'comprehensive' Quake coverage, and the shareware version hasn't even come out yet! Blimey! We ought to start a regular Quake section in the magazine or something!

Quakemania reached fever pitch in the CVG office this month, as the first concrete facts about shareware Quake started to pour in from various sources around the globe. Eye witness accounts from E3, internet reports from beta testers and journal extracts from the game's head programmer have all helped paint a clearer picture of what will undoubtedly become the biggest PC release of the year, if not the decade!

⌚ There's the Quake logo in a cemetery! Ace!

⌚ There's the rocket launcher as it used to be. Apparently this will only appear during deathmatch in the shareware version.

⌚ Dead monsters stay where they drop. It's not known whether you can blow up the corpses a la Duke Nukem 3D, but we hope so.

⌚ Wow! Look at that symbol on the ceiling! And the wood! It's unbelievable! Quake's 3D graphics engine takes PC gaming to the next level and beyond. How will the PlayStation and Saturn conversions cope with this level of detail?!

JACKANORY!

With the imminent release of shareware Quake, id have finally settled on a background story to go with the game. In the near future, the government have created a top secret machine (based on alien technology) called the Slipgate. When operated, the Slipgate causes an earthquake in the time/space continuum, creating a crack in time through which humans can travel to the past or future. However, a deadly terrorist organisation known as Quake have managed to steal a Slipgate, and are using it to stage surprise hit-and-run attacks on military installations all over the world. Which is where you come in. As a highly trained counter terrorist expert, you've been drafted in by the government to infiltrate Quake's base and shut down their operation at all costs. The fate of the free world rests on your shoulders! Again!

⌚ The architecture for the new levels is much more impressive than in the qtest. Some of the underwater maze sections are just staggering!

REVENGE OF THE SON OF DOOM PART 3!

- As it stands, registered Quake will feature four episodes of nine levels, each with a different environmental theme (relating to various time periods). The first level of every episode is set inside a high-tech government installation, and at the end of the stage you discover a Slipgate which takes you to that episode's Quake base.
- The shareware release will comprise the entire first episode, which is set in the past and filled with a mixture of military and mediaeval architecture. There is also talk of a number of deathmatch only levels on the final registered version, though that could change.

Ⓢ Long drops are potentially fatal in Quake so watch where you tread. If you fall only a short way, you'll hear a horrible crunching sound as your characters legs break! Eurgh!

Ⓢ The Dog is quite easy to kill, especially when using the Super Nailgun as demonstrated above. However, they do attack in packs, and their large numbers can sometimes overwhelm you.

LEVEL SELECT, QUAKE STYLE

Quake does away with the user-friendly difficulty and episode select menus of Doom, and instead makes them both into individual levels! The difficulty select is a large open chamber with three hallways leading to a visible Slipgate at the end of each one. The first hallway (the easy difficulty) has a flat floor and no obstacles, while the second hallway (normal) has an angled bridge and looks a bit more intimidating. The third hallway (hard) has a broken bridge with a bubbling pit of lava underneath! There's even a secret route for the nightmare difficulty level! After you choose your difficulty setting you are warped to another stage where you must choose between four Slipgates each corresponding to one of the four episodes.

ARRGH! REAL MONSTERS!

The monster development continues with some hellish new additions to the Quake extended family and improved artificial intelligence all round. Highlights include the dog, the Hell Knight (a harder version of the knight who uses magical attacks), the Enforcer (like the soldier but dressed in a chemical suit), the Tar Baby (a near invisible blob who explodes when he dies) and a spider monster who throws homing fireballs like the Revenant in Doom 2. All of the monsters are now much more aggressive, and if you don't kill them they will chase you from one end of a level to another, even through water! One of the beta testers told tales of a Shambler actually JUMPING OFF AN ELEVATED BRIDGE and running after him! Awesome!

Ⓢ Apparently, the Shambler is female. Could have fooled us.

NEWS

PUMP UP THE VIOLENCE!

In its time Doom was one of the most gory games around, and id look set to continue this tradition with Quake. All of the monsters have multiple gruesome death sequences (complete with 'orrible death rattles), and it is now possible to gib absolutely any creature in the game! Gibbing, by the way, is when you blow something (or someone) into bloodied chunks, each called a gib. The Zombie, for instance, can only be destroyed by gibbing. Quake also sees the return of Doom's explosive barrels, along with crushing ceilings, deadly lava, and giant spikes!

⌚ Watch the gibs fly! Here the new look grenade lobber takes apart a duo of marauding Hell Knights. You can tell them from ordinary Knights because they've got spiked shoulder pads and horns on their helmets. Look at the way the blood spatters on their armour. That's top that is.

LETHAL WEAPONS

All of the weapons have received a graphical make over, with some of them completely changing in both appearance and properties. The Axe now looks a lot cooler (thankfully) with about three different attack sequences, while both the shotgun, rocket launcher and grenade lobber have all been slightly touched up. The biggest changes however are in the nailguns. The ordinary nailgun is now a double-barrelled beast that fires twin streams of nails, while the super nailgun looks a bit like a black version of the rotating chaingun in Doom, and rocks the screen when you fire it!

⌚ The new look Nailgun makes short(ish) work of a rogue Shambler. The screen actually rocks slightly when you fire this weapon, and the sound it makes is absolutely perfect!

⌚ You won't see the lightning gun in shareware Quake.

⌚ The explosions now have a sprite core to make them less pixely. They're also light sourced.

⌚ This thing's official name is the 'Fiend'. He's incredibly agile for his size, and some major strafing is necessary if you don't want to get caught under that leap.

⌚ The Enforcer fires bursts of laser beams from that cannon. Later in the game you can collect a cool Bio Suit like his that lets you breath underwater.

SOUNDS GOOD!

One of the biggest new additions to Quake is the implementation of ambient environmental 'background' noise. For example, when standing around an open area, you can hear the wind blowing high above you. Water makes a slow, splashing sound; slime burps and churns; lava bubbles and crackles; computer terminals bleep and click; heavy machinery rumbles... you get the idea. What's more, Nine Inch Nails have done an entire sound track to be included on the final CD! We haven't heard any of it yet, but we've been told its ace! Can't wait.

Ⓢ Zombies can hide underwater. Well they are dead already.

I HAVE THE POWER!

Like Doom, Quake will feature several power ups dotted about the many levels, each with varying effects. Along with the standard health and armour bonuses, players can find artifacts to boost the power of their weapons, make them invisible (all that's left are a pair of floating eyes!) and even allow them to swim underwater. The invincibility power up (called Satan Mode!) is a floating red pentagram which, when collected, makes your armour rocket up to 666%! This game's far more evil than Doom – the game of the devil!

Ⓢ The locked doors have huge chains and bars across them. So you have to go looking for a key to unlock them.

FIVE THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW ABOUT QUAKE

1. Quake is the name of John Carmack's character he used to play as in Dungeons and Dragons. Hence the original fantasy setting of Quake.

2. Quake has already been banned in Germany!

3. id started work on Quake before Doom.

4. id timed John Carmack to see how long it would take him to implement dynamic lighting in Quake! It took him one hour, including toilet breaks!

5. We WILL have shareware Quake by next issue, and if you can find it on the net, so will you!

NINTENDO 64 PRELAUNCH EXCITEMENT

By the time you read this, the N64 has been available in Japan for almost two weeks. But we still thought you'd appreciate sharing in some of the excitement which occurred in the run up to launch day.

Pre-orders for N64 were officially stopped on the 9th of June. By that time, 100% of all possible reservations had been accounted for. To appease those left out who still wanted the chance to buy a machine, many shops announced they were opening the doors at 12:00 midnight to steady the flow of thousands more customers on first day of sale.

In the two weeks prior to launch, shops had N64s running copies of Super Mario 64 to satiate the public's need for this monumental game. Time with the controller was limited to five minutes per person, and our overseas correspondent has reported that tempers were getting pretty fraught under the circumstances – maybe because five minutes is barely enough time to get off the first level, so those queuing for a go were getting even more frustrated. While all this was going on, camera crews filmed the faces of awestruck kids and adults alike for national TV news. If only you lot got so excited about games, eh!

⬆ Word has it, there's only one copy of Pilot Wings for every five N64s. Worrying news if it turns out to be true.

⬆ This is the game. The one that's been causing a sensation at stores all over Japan. Look below! You can win it with the machine!

⬆ Akihabara – the centre of video gaming in Tokyo. Anything you want can be bought here. Imagine the crowds here on N64 launch day.

⬆ Look at them! Row upon row of N64s with crowds packed around them. If only stores here would do this kind of thing!

⬆ Five minutes kid, that's all you've got. Imagine what's going through the heads of these people, after waiting for so long.

WIN A NINTENDO 64 – HOT FROM JAPAN!

Well, maybe you are excited about N64, but don't have the same opportunity to show it as those lucky Japanese. Our competition to win an N64 (printed last month) has proven our most popular yet. Every day almost two-thirds of our mailbag consists of brilliant designs for a new Super Mario power-up, including some pretty far-out suggestions for the tie-breaker. We suspect there are thousands more of you who'd love a better chance at winning one of the first N64s in the world. So we're increasing the odds in your favour, as CVG now has TWO N64s TO GIVE AWAY! A rare commodity indeed. That's how much we DO LOVE YOU! Closing date for the competition in issue #176 was 23 July. That deadline has been extended until 20 August. The rules are the same: invent a new power-up for Mario. Show us what the power-up looks like, and the effects it has on Mario. When you're satisfied with the result, send to us with the answer to this tie-breaker: How did Yoshi acquire arms to steer in Super Mario Kart? Send your entries to:

YOSHI USES HIS OWN EGGS IN HIS COOKIES COMP (Mk.2), CVG, Priory Court, 30-32 Farringdon Lane, London. EC1R 3AU

And YES you can ENTER TWICE if your second idea is so much better than the last. Best of luck, we're looking forward to printing some of the best ideas in CVG sometime very soon.

the fusion of speed, strength & skill he after-effects of E3 have made themselves felt in no uncertain terms! Though N64 isn't scheduled to arrive in the UK until Christmas at the earliest, it has left many 32-bit users feeling insecure. To which we say, "WHAT, ARE YOU MAD!" - E3 was an excellent event for Saturn and PlayStation too, y'know. Just £199 for those systems now! What? Did we say something wrong?

DON'T SELL ME CHEAP

Dear CVG,

I am not one for buying imports, but after waiting 14 months for the N (Never) 64 I was going to make an exception. I started ringing up a few shops only to find out the price would be somewhere in the region of £700-£1500! How can they charge that much for a games console costing £125 in Japan? Okay so they might have to go to Japan and get them, and then do a UK conversion, but I bet if they sold it for £400 they could still make a good profit! After all, they wouldn't go all the way for one machine would they.

At the above price I can't see anyone buying the machine, so in the end I think they will have to bring the price down to around £400 (and even then not many people would buy it, like they didn't buy the Saturn).

Finally, in the issue 175 contents page you stated that Pilot Wings is one reason why you're all getting N64s on launch day. Are you still going to? If so, since you are all that rich, can you get me one?

I don't own a game machine and I intend buying one. SO would you buy a SNES and wait for the N64 to be launched in this country, or buy a Saturn? I love Saturn games but then I loved my Mega Drive until I saw the SNES! Please help a confused but dedicated 5-year CVG reader.

Andrew Spiretos, Leeds

CVG: We know that importers are unable to buy in N64s, with SM64, for less than £500 from Japan. That's after tax has been added from Japan to Hong Kong, then Hong Kong to the UK. We'd say that those people charging around £700 aren't ripping you off too badly. Anyone who has quoted around the £1500 mark are crooks, or else victims of crooks. Hate to sound smug, but the reason we all can afford N64s is because we have 'a man in Japan' who can buy them in for the street price - £165 (25 000 Yen). And it's never too late to buy a Super NES.

WELL, CAN THE SATURN HANDLE VF3?

Dear CVG,

Your mag's safe. Any news of new Capcom beat 'em ups coming out for the Saturn? Do you know is Alpha 2 is going to be launched on the Saturn and/ or what news of Street Fighter 3? Could the Saturn handle Virtua Fighter 3, and if so when will it be released?

If Sega do make a 64-bit console, will it be a stand-alone or a Saturn add-on? In the UMK3 review last issue (175) you mentioned a 100% damage combo with Smoke, for the original MK3 game. I can get a 100% damage combo with Kabal, on the Mega Drive game. Just wondering, can you? GREAT mag. High Five is a good idea! So go boil your head, someone from Solihull.

PS Will there really be a 32-bit Game Boy and how much might it cost?

Phil Westmancoat, Wolverhampton

CVG: Yu Suzuki, Director of all AM's divisions and head of AM2, has gone on record as saying that VF3 is possible on Saturn. Make of that what you will.

Ed: Yes, on the Mega Drive. But you can't do it on the Saturn because all his combos have been weakened.

MAIL

LONG TIME NO SEE

Dear CVG,

That sad git, Dani from Barcelona who hates SFA. Why? It is totally cool! Maybe the strategy element of saving power for Alpha strikes and counters was too much for his limited intellect. And his mates? Well they obviously have such busy lives that they have nothing better to do. My only complaint is probably the fact that, where there is a Street Fighter game there is always another sequel. Surely after about nine or ten SFs Capcom could give it a rest?

Next up, Alien Trilogy. I bought it on Friday afternoon and had completed it by 8pm the next day, on hardest setting. So why did all the reviews I read say it was very hard? Or is it because I'm such a hardened Doom player and so I waltzed through it. My mate also completed it after borrowing it off me. Finally, I want to moan about release dates. Why is it that only Capcom are bad at sticking to release dates. I have had six different dates ranging from 11th April to 31st May! Then Resident Evil. I went out to get it on 2 May, and found it's been put back until 28 June. Bit drastic I'd say as it has been out in the US/ Japan for 1 1/2 months by then.

Neil Lewis, Wolverhampton

CVG: You don't have to tell us about delays, and it isn't just Capcom whose seen as guilty. Nor is it really their fault. For the time being the UK, and indeed Europe, has got to realise that we are really just a very small part of major Japanese companies' business. In some cases it's as though we should consider ourselves lucky just to have a sniff of the real action - some ten times more intense than what you know a games market to be. As for the British titles, they have less of an excuse!

Resident Evil, delayed!

No sign of PS X-Men either!

CAT TITTER

Dear CVG,

I find your magazine very good for a read with over 100 pages, and it is cheap. However you do have some bad points. For example you say on the front of your magazine, "Every new game reviewed and rated". This is not true because I own a Jaguar and I consider myself a Jaguar expert. I know that you have not reviewed I-War, Battle Morph CD, Creature Shock CD, Primal Rage CD, Hoverstrike CD, and Myst CD. All of which are available to buy in the shops at the time this letter was written. You also said in your preview of Quake, "Saturn, PS, N64 versions planned". Don't you even know about the Jaguar version? It is already 32% complete. I am 14 years old and have to go to school and revise for my exams. SO no matter how hard I try I can't dedicate my whole life to my Jaguar and consoles. But you get paid to do this, so why do I know more about Jaguars than you? Please do not slag off the Jaguar because it really is a good machine if you have the Jaguar CD, and don't forget the Jaguar 2 and 3 which will be released Christmas 96 and 97. Please give me a Sega Saturn as, after the Jaguar, it's a great games machine.

Jonathan Smith, West Midlands

CVG: Our claim is relevant to all new games that are soon to be available, or at least have been presented to us for review purposes. We did ask Atari to provide us with samples of all those games you mentioned, Jonathan, but they just didn't pass them on. So we focused on subjects perceived hotter at the time - ie Sega, Sony, and Nintendo - all of whom were more forthcoming with software. By the way, you're kidding yourself if you think Quake will ever be released on the Jaguar - that system is now defunct.

THE BABY SITTER

Dear CVG,

I am a PlayStation owner who bought the machine from a well-known retailer. It cost me £379 with Tekken, Ridge Racer, and Jumping Flash. I had planned to buy one for a while, and, on purchase, was really impressed with Sony's Baby. However I have just heard that the PlayStation price is now reduced by £100 to £199. To add insult to injury, the deal I secured with the three games now only costs £249 - a massive saving of £130.

Now it took a lot of time and hard work to save almost £400 to buy my PlayStation, and at the time I was satisfied with my decision. But now my loyalty has been thrown back in my face.

I am all for Sony having a low price to compete with the Saturn, and to mop up more of the prospective Super Console owners. After all the extra revenue the PlayStation attracts will benefit me in terms of better software.

However a £130 decrease overnight really p*s me off. What the hell is going on?

Here's a tip Sony: Don't treat your customers with contempt, else I'll buy a Nintendo 64.

I want answers.

Rob Allen, Staffs.

CVG: You need a holiday. So we suggest going to Tokyo for a week, chill out in a cool hotel, and go shopping in the Akihabara district for an N64. It'll cost you less than the £1500 you're considering to buy the machine on import.

BAG

STAR LETTER

Dear CVG,
Street Fighter Alpha cack?
Don't pull my nipples!...
Gary Smith (oops!), Stevenage

CVG: Sorry Gary, the rest of your letter was unprintable. In fact we have it locked in a room, and nobody dare go inside - it was that offensive!

GREAT ANALOGUE CONTROL SWINDLE

Dear CVG,
Oh dear, dear, dear. Reports state that Sega are bringing out a new 3D romp to rival Mario 64, and an analogue controller as well. Who are Sega trying to copy? Hmm, Nintendo? No doubt this new controller will be a quickly made bad rush job, and try to pitifully attempt to rival Nintendo's new controller. And what's the betting that the ideas and the new controller were up and put into development immediately after the Shoshinkai how in Japan where Nintendo revealed their forthcoming plans?

Why can't Sega just be content in being second best to Nintendo? Everyone knows that Sega will never have the proper go on Nintendo. And why?

Because people don't trust Sega. Only a few months after releasing the Saturn they are reported to be working on a Saturn 2! What! Do I hear another transitional machine (Saturn)? They never learn. So that means people will have wasted their money again because Sega drop machines when another one comes out (32X, Game Gear, Mega CD). Why can't they fully exploit their new technology like Nintendo? That's why people don't trust Sega. Go on, I dare you to print this letter. I bet you won't, you favour Sega anyway!

Paul Hurst, Chester

CVG: While we have the highest respect for Nintendo, they're not the only innovators out there. Nintendo's success rate is so high, simply because they are more careful with the number of products they release. Saturn is definitely not a transitional machine for Sega. Sure, the analogue controller idea is an answer to Nintendo's. But this doesn't make the result any less worthwhile. As for your last comment, CVG is a fan of everything original and exciting. Sega product fits quite nicely into that bracket at the moment; that any one with eyes can appreciate.

A FEW OF MY FAVOURITE THINGS

Dear CVG,

I was very pleased to see coverage of my favourite all-time game Vampire Hunter in your May issue. I feel that the game has more depth than even Street Fighter Alpha, and that the controls are very instinctive. I cannot understand why the game is so underrated in this country because my Japanese friend tells me that, when it first came out, it drew massive crowds of people - even bigger than the crowds of around Alpha 2 in London. I have to admit that when it first came out on Saturn I rushed out to buy the game and was pleased to add it to my X-Men, Zero, Capcom collection. Anyway, the two main questions that I would like to ask are as follows:

1. Where do you think that I could get hold of an anthology of Capcom artwork (including VH)? I have tried the Japan centre in London, but I couldn't find one. I know these exist.
2. Has Alpha 2 been confirmed for the Saturn and also Marvel Super Heroes?

Thanks for your time.
Sam Grant, London

CVG: The book you're after is Video Game Magazine Gamest Mook Vol.17. It's published by Shinseisha, and was released last year for 2,000 Yen. The ISBN number is T1063381172000. We have news elsewhere in this issue about the Capcom line up, but, while you're here, yes SFA2 and Marvel Super Heroes are coming to Saturn. PlayStation is on its way to PlayStation too.

EXPENSIVE TASTE

Dear CVG,

Why don't you do a CD for Saturn and PlayStation containing cheats and guides for games. This would be a brilliant idea. Of course not all the time, but say one out of every four issues. And of course put the price up. You could use the cheat section of the issue for more reviews. Why is the paper different in the Free Play section? Could you do a poster now and again with the top games like UMK3, Alpha, and Darkstalkers. Oh yes, why did you do an April Fool? It was stupid, and a waste of mag space. Anyway, great mag. Keep it up and thanks for your time.

Ian Sewell, Merseyside

CVG: A cheats CD is an idea we've considered, but we'd rather everyone can afford the magazine. Free Play is our solution to moving unsightly lists of cheats and codes to make room for more attractive features on games. The paper is relatively cheap, which means we can expand it if necessary to accommodate even more red-hot, exclusive, insider game info.

HARDER THAN YOU

Dear CVG,

The main reason I'm writing is to ask you about the Nintendo 64. You see I was going to get a Saturn until I heard about the N64 and now I'm really puzzled and I can't decide whether to get a Saturn or the Nintendo machine. I can see that the Nintendo is more powerful than the Saturn, and therefore should have the better games. But as my favourite type of games are fighting games and I think the Saturn has better fighting games do you think I should buy a Saturn. Please help as I've puzzled over this for ages and I can't decide what to do. What do you think?

AK Hudson, Walthamstow

CVG: In quality and quantity, the Saturn is just about the best system for fighting games. It has the cream of Capcom's recent efforts, and VF2. Still, some would argue that Tekken 2 is all you'll ever need. Tough, innit. At this stage N64 is AK Hudson's worst option.

HE WHO LAUGHS LAST?

Dear CVG,

With the launch of the Nintendo 64 almost here, it looks like Sega and Sony's machines have already become modern day dinosaurs. Both have great games, and many more big software titles in the pipeline for both systems. But ask yourself is it really fair that within such a short space of time the Saturn and the PlayStation have become outdated. I mean, when you've spent £300 to £400 on a console, you expect it to be superior to anything else around for quite some time. I purchased my next generation console at Christmas, which is a PlayStation, and at the same time grabbed an extra control pad, a memory card, and a copy of Ridge Racer. At that time I thought £350 was worth it for a, so-called, Next Generation console. I also knew nothing about Nintendo's 64-bit technology. Until issue 171 of CVG when I read the eleven-page showcase on Nintendo 64. And to my extreme annoyance not only found out it was twice as powerful, with Silicon Graphics etc... but a hell of a lot cheaper as well. I also had a brief look in Nintendo Magazine System, which stated that Nintendo 64 is capable of 3D fighting games that make Tekken 2 look like Mortal Kombat on the Game Boy. This is not good news for someone who has just bought a rather expensive 32-bit console. What I would like to know is how come Sega and Sony can produce their 32-bit consoles and slap a whopping £300-£400 price tag on it, and Nintendo can produce a 64-bit system which is better than most PC CD-ROM set ups, and is equivalent to Silicon Graphics Systems costing hundreds of thousands of pounds. And only have a price tag of around £200. I think that Sega and Sony owe it to their customers to consider producing a 64-bit upgrade at reasonable cost, to enable Saturn and PlayStation owners to enjoy the benefits of 64-bit technology. After all, we've already forked out almost twice the price of Nintendo 64. After all I've said, I still think Sega and Sony are great. The letter from Harold H Thomas was one of the best letters I have read for quite some time.

Clare Roe, Liverpool

CVG: You can't blame Sega or Sony for their price strategy. They depend on people like yourself, commonly referred to as "early adopters", to pay top price for the machines at launch. You admit that you considered £350 to be a fair price for the hardware and software you received in exchange - at the time. And could you really have waited any longer to own what you wanted? Probably not. Once companies are satisfied that they have enticed enough people at that level, they lower the bar to accommodate still more peoples' cash constraints. Difference with Nintendo is that they aim to appeal to the average consumer straightaway. That's their whole strategy: "What does everybody really want?". To which the answer is invariably a cheap point of access. No need to worry about an extra £10-15 for games which are, without doubt, the best around. About 64-bit upgrades: don't hold your breath.

VF2 is a godly game!

SCART SINGING

Dear CVG,

The UK games market is a sick joke. It is totally stupid that we pay more for games and systems that run slower, have borders top and bottom of the screen, and are six months to a year behind what is available in Japan and the US.

Those in the games industry should stop wasting time and money designing and manufacturing PAL consoles, and toning down NTSC games to run on them. What they should do is release the same games and consoles in the UK that are released in the US. The only difference needed is a different PSU. That way UK gamers could experience the same quality of games available in the US, and the prices should be lower because of manufacturers not having to redesign them.

This may seem to be an ideal solution only to those with a SCART TV, but a PAL Booster lead, a SCART lead and even a game could be bundled with a NTSC console and released in the UK. Those three extra things would cost under £100, which would be a far better deal than paying over £100 more for a PAL console, compared to a US NTSC console.

I have not mentioned any particular system because it could apply to any. The way I see things is like this: you can either buy a US/ Jap console and games and pay through the nose for them from importers, or have a long wait to buy the lower standard official releases. It is a no win situation for UK gamers. What is your view on this? Do you know if the N64 will be yet another slowed-down machine?

Daniel McAlister, London

Paul: Cheer up, eh, Daniel! Not everyone is as keen as you to see the UK get what committed gamers consider the ideal. I've been annoyed with this whole PAL/ NTSC thing for around six years, and nothing has changed. The only revelation I can think of is Psygnosis' Wipeout which is better than the US NTSC version. Most UK gamers are happily oblivious to speed difference and display limitations of games running on UK machines. Most people couldn't care less. Least of all the hardware manufacturers. Grrr!

GEORGE AND THE DRAGOON

Dear CVG,

Thankyou very much for giving Panzer Dragoon Zwei a High Five! I went and bought it on the day it came out and I think it's the best Saturn game so far. I've got one problem though, I've finished it and I haven't got the Pandora's Box yet. Just how do you get it? Also, I think that your mag's the best one now (it was very rubbish about a year ago) and it's much better, bigger and cheaper than Gamesmaster or GamePro. Keep up the good work!

PS. If there's ever a job going on your magazine, I will have it! Just a joke! Ha ha ha!

PPS. If there's ever a free game going, I will have it! Not a joke! Ha ha ha!

George Evans, Chadderton

TOM: Glad you enjoyed Panzer. To be honest we've had loads of calls from people who can't find Pandora's Box. And nobody here can understand why. Our guide tells you all there is to know, and obviously it works, otherwise we wouldn't have the screen-shots to prove it. Maybe your Saturn is out of memory? Check the front-end menu.

WEIRDO CORNER

Dear CVG,

Hi there!

I've had them all, age or size doesn't matter to me, 8, 16, 32, or 64 I don't care. I've gone from a sleek one that liked to be touched to a small black one with rubber and a flash of colour on her side. Then there was the hunky grey, like a Lada without wheels, soon I moved on to a sexy little black number, but I dumped her for a newer model, she was ugly but oh what power, and I liked the way she grabbed my cart.

My latest conquest was a fancy beige number with keys in all the right places, but then SHE caught my eye, I had seen her on the telly and she had enticed me. The way her flat grey body shone in the glow of TV light made me tremble, her round top made me shake from ear to nose, I had to have her. I set off. Money in hand I walked into the shop and strode over to her, passing all the imitations without a look, but wait..., what's this?

She was black with speckled bits, unlike anything else out there. I asked the man who was parked nearby waiting to pounce all about her. "She's a bit old, for you sir, not your type, why don't you look at this little grey one, she's young and fresh not a wrinkle in sight". I wasn't convinced, I asked him about imports on the younger model, his greasy smile started to fade. I pondered over this older playmate, maybe she could tame me and get me to settle down. Price was important to me, I questioned him over the difference in dollars, his smile hit the floor with a thump.

I proudly walked out of the shop with my little friend under my arm, once I showed her the TV and started to play and haven't looked back since. We have fourteen little ones now each with their own title. I have settled down and I'm getting married next week, I've learnt all my vows, my favourite is "I take thee 3DO".

Mr V Jackson, Doncaster

CVG: What a load of crap.

BEST THINGS IN LIFE WE KEEP FOR OURSELVES

Dear CVG,

Answer these questions or I'll sue you, cheers!

1. Is there a Super Mario 64 2 in the pipeline for the N64?
2. I have been informed that the UK N64, if released, will run 17.5% slower than the US version because of differences in TV sets. Is this true? If so, will it affect the quality of gameplay and the general performance of the N64?
3. What will the box for the N64 cartridge look like?
4. Is CVG buying an import version of the N64, or are you waiting for god knows how long until it is released over here?
5. Is there any Monkey Island/ Simon the Sorcerer types of adventures being produced for N64?
6. I was flicking through Ceefax and I saw that the N64 would be $250 WITHOUT a game, and Mario 64 would cost an extra $50-$70. Is this true?
7. When Sega brought the Saturn price down to about £300, why did they state that the price could not be cut any more, and then when a cheaper system (N64) is produced they bring it down to £199. I feel very distressed as I forked out over £350 for my Saturn.
8. In Mario 64, Mario can climb, swim, perform cartwheels, helicopter jumps, kick off walls, punch, ride a magic-carpet, fly, hang on to various objects, carry things, and crawl. Are there any more techniques which Mario can perform, and how can all these be achieved with just two action buttons and a Z Trigger?
9. Are Mario 64, Pilot Wings 64, and Saikyo Habu Shogi the only release games for the UK N64?
10. Please could you send me a poster of Mario 64 and N64, if you possess such tremendous things. Thank you, you magnificently kind-hearted people.

Chris Drew, Walkington

CVG: 1. Good grief.

2. Informed by who? Anyway, whoever it was is probably right. But Nintendo are usually pretty good at ensuring their first-party games are adapted to suit.

3. Hopefully there will be pics of the initial line-up in news. If not we can DEFINITELY show you next month.

4. Yes. No.

5. LucasArts are working on a new Monkey Island game.

6. Yes.

7. They had to, didn't they.

8. You missed a few abilities that we already know about - but aren't telling until we can show you them in action. You'll also be amazed at how just two action buttons and a Z Trigger can work miracles with the 3D stick.

9. Shogi is unlikely for the UK, but expect to see at least ten others to accompany Mario and Pilot Wings.

10. Magnificent? Probably. Kind? Not this time, sorry.

ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST

Dear CVG,

Am I the only person left waiting for the N64? All of your readers are going on about the PS and Saturn, while one of my mates who was waiting for the N64 has opted for a Saturn. With all the delays I must say I am tempted to do the same. So if there are any people out there in the same situation as me, please write in. Maybe CVG can set up a group with monthly meetings to help us out until N64 is released over here.

Andrew Spiretos, Leeds

Games like SM64 are easy as falling off a log for N64!

Incredible special effects! Wow, can't wait for the sequel!!!

Pilot Wings 64 is another top-notch launch game for N64.

Okay that's enough, I wanna go down now. I-WANNA-GO-DOWN!!!

To date, there's been only one point-and-click adventure on PlayStation. Discworld. And it was a huge success! Not surprising really, considering it's a direct port of an excellent PC game based around the best-selling Terry Pratchett books. However, if Discworld has any weakness, it's the fact that it IS just a PC portover. For a PlayStation game, it all looks a bit primitive. At least, that's what York-based developers, Revolution, reckon. And they're not just spouting hot air. This is the team that put together Beneath A Steel Sky, one of the best PC adventures to date. And their next project promises to be far better. For Broken Sword, Revolution have drawn on the finest cinematic, animation and musical talents around. What's more, they've concentrated on optimising the PlayStation version to make full use of the hardware. This game could well demonstrate that PC isn't the natural home for point-and-click adventures at all!

Considering the mass popularity of point-and-click adventures on PC, it's bizarre they haven't been pushed onto the consoles. Well, all that could be set to change with the first PlayStation-dedicated adventure.

BROKEN

Backdrop detail unlike any seen before! Characters move freely behind scenery.

PLAYSTATION POWER!

The PC version is already in its Beta stage (final testing) and looks incredible. However, Revolution claim the PlayStation version is going to be even more impressive. The PS's FMV capabilities have allowed them to increase the colour and resolution of the cartoon streams. Likewise, the speed and frame-rate of the in-game animation is superior. This is all due to the PlayStation version being created alongside the PC game.

Full-screen movie quality cut-scenes on PS.

One of the many cinematic intermissions.

Here we are, outside a Parisian hotel. All very gallic, dontcha fink?

Inside the hotel now. The view neatly pans across as you move around.

'TIS THE STUFF OF LEGENDS!

Broken Sword is a game steeped in ancient myth. "All the historical information used in the plot is thoroughly researched and accurate, however it doesn't ram a history lesson down your throat," explains Charles Cecil, director of Broken Sword. "It's similar to an Indiana Jones movie in that respect."

Indeed, the plot covers similar historical territory to the likes of Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade. It's all based around the legend of the Knights Templar, an ancient sect of warrior monks from the Tenth Century crusades, who lived in the Temple Of Solomon and dedicated their lives to protecting the Holy Land from the Saracens. They were said to have committed hideous atrocities during the peak of their power, and also possessed incredible treasures, including the Crown Of Thorns and the Holy Grail! However, in the Fourteenth Century, to escape persecution by King Philip of France, their massive fleet vanished – taking their treasure with them!

Broken Sword's superb cartoon intro starts the plot rolling. Introducing the main character, George Stobard, a californian enjoying a holiday in Paris, the action soon kicks in, when a street-performing clown steals an elderly gentleman's briefcase, before blowing up a cafe! As it turns out, this clown is a member of terrorist cult, the briefcase contains a medieval manuscript and George is plunged into a race to uncover the legendary power of the Templars!

BROKEN SWORD

EAR CANDY!

The sound in Broken Sword has been carefully calculated. Music subtly underscores the dialogue and only surfaces at precise moments. Professional soundtrack directors used their experience of influencing peoples moods, to help lay out the soundtrack. For instance, on entering an alley, spooky music starts up to create an ominous feel. But on future visits there's no music, as this would spoil the initial sensation of dread. What's more, individual music bites were created for each specific situation. The composer, Barrington Pheloung (bless you!), who was responsible for music on Inspector Morse, Truly Madly Deeply and Nostradamus, claims he's put together enough music for three feature films!

CARTOON TIME!

Revolution has spent a considerable amount of time and money (over £1,000,000 to date) on making Broken Sword as cinematic an experience as possible. To this effect, professional filmmakers were consulted for the project. For instance, using a low 'camera' view was suggested over the more regular heightened angle, to give the player a greater feeling of 'being there'.

The incredibly detailed backdrops (of which there are over 80) have all been hand-drawn by a senior artist from the Don Bluth studios. These scenes were then coloured using a computer art package. The sprites were also hand drawn by a host of international artists, including some who were responsible for the likes of American Tail and Tank Girl the movie.

↑ This shows how the scrolling hotel scene originally looks. Multiple vanishing points is sometimes required.

↑ Original pencil art of an in-game scene.

↑ And the final computer-coloured scene. Magnifique!

NEXT MONTH... GO BREAK A SWORD!

We've almost solely ranted about the presentation of Broken Sword. However, the depth of gameplay is promised to be utterly superb! Something we're hopefully going to confirm when we review the game next month!

DARKNESS is a state of MIND

Virtua Cop. It's a bloody awesome game! Those who criticise it as just a walk-through 'seen-it-once' shooting game, don't know what they're talking about. Played in Ranking Mode, it's one of the greatest highscore challenges around. Hanging onto your x9 score multiplier is one of the most fearful feelings a game can generate! And now Virtua Cop 2 is set to take that sensation of terror further still! RELOAD!!

HELP ME!

Coin-op VC2 features considerably more impressive graphics and a larger play area than its predecessor, and there've been doubts as to whether AM2 would be capable of pulling off as accurate a conversion as they did with the original game. However, from this first version, signs are very positive. Currently, the graphics are at a slightly lower resolution than you'd expect, and the sound effects seem ropey. With AM2's near untarnished reputation for quality though, it seems likely that this is merely because these are early renditions. Once all the parts of the game are in place, touching up the quality of the textures and improving the sound quality will be much easier. This is something AM2 did with the conversion of original Virtua Cop.

Sega have taken the wraps off the first of their big upcoming releases. And first of the first is nothing less than...

VIRTUA COP 2

PRETTY BOLD, AREN'T WE?

Revealed at the Los Angeles E3 show was a surprisingly advanced playable demo of Saturn Virtua Cop 2. Only half of the beginner's level was actually there, however the demo seems to have been specifically made for the expo, as it features all the on-screen indicators, the music, the sound-effects and the speech - things which aren't normally included until much later in development. And, aside from some minor missing details (the shootable road barriers, for instance), this whole section was basically complete! Plus, just to tease those dedicated enough to complete the section, the words COMING SOON appeared on-screen at the end!

⬆ A heart-stopping moment as rookie, Jayne Marshall, almost runs down some bystanders!

⬆ "Don't shoot!" they cry strolling across the screen.

SHOOT OUTSIDE THE SCREEN!

Virtua Cop 2 is, of course, going to use the Virtua Gun, and the demo worked superbly with it. We've noticed that some of the coin-ops seem badly set-up, with the guns firing slowly or off-target. Saturn VC2 though, is as rapid and accurate as the first Cop conversion. No problemo!

I'LL TELL YOU WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW!

Even this short section of game demonstrates how much tougher coding Virtua Cop 2 is going to be. The opening area leads into a spacious jewelry store, with multiple glass cabinets that can be destroyed. EVL gunmen run around an elevated balcony, and there are huge chandeliers that can be swung around when shot. This scenery manipulation, when used in the VC2 coin-op, led to enhancements in Saturn Virtua Cop – the swinging hook on the level one warehouse being a prime example (it doesn't move in the arcade, just try it!).

Most impressive of all though, is the car-chase scene. This shifts the 3D backdrops around at an amazing rate, and there's masses of interactive scenery (all the cars can be shot to pieces). All these features are already present, which bodes well for other complex areas such as the train stage – which wends into the distance – and the panoramic Zeppelin hangar. The only noticeable criticism, is that the demo was running about a third slower than the coin-op. Considering the Saturn conversion of the first game actually ran faster than its arcade parent though, this isn't something we need worry too much about.

⬆ Will AM2 be able to fully replicate the windscreens flaking away?

⬆ There's far more action and more panoramic scenes in VC2. More complex texturing too!

⬆ Expect more destructible scenery than before! Oh yes!

⬆ Those signs up ahead provide Level One's route choice!

NEXT MONTH... MORE PUNK-SHOOTING ACTION!

Once the ball starts rolling on an AM2 conversion, big things happen every month. New stuff next month is guaranteed, as we build up to the autumn/ winter release!

Of all the excuses for another 3D shoot 'em up, Core Design have invented the least plausible of all. But what the heck...

BLAM! MACHINEHEAD

Similar to how the red weed envelops the Earth in HG Wells' War of the Worlds, Machinehead is a planet eating pest. Typically this is all the work of one mad scientist, which could amount to a lot of the same old thing – only, the cure this time around is a 'tastefully nude' woman sitting astride a missile. And, of course, it only makes sense that you adopt the role of this unfortunate gal. We know you're just dying to find out more.

I like to ride my Vorpall Blade

Her name is Dr Kimberly Stride, and she's strapped to this missile because a sick-in-the-head scientist named Orville (the geek) put her there. Originally Kim had planned to launch the missile herself, to waste the geek's nanotechnological parasite – aka Machinehead. But the geek caught her in the act, and devised a perverse little game: survive his traps and he'll free Kim, then terminate his creation.

Flying in a blue dream

The Vorpall Blade hovers just above the ground, and players – as Kim – have full 360° directional control. It behaves more like a hovercraft, as opposed to a ground-level jet-propelled aircraft. A cushion of air allows the VB to track the surface of any terrain as opposed to skimming above it. For example it's possible, to a degree, to rise up the curved walls of the Termite Warren. As you are no doubt hoping by now, the VB is loaded with flashy artillery:

The most awesome weapon is Disrupter, which powers three nuclear capsules into the air, which explode on contact to emit a wave of radioactivity!

We also like the IO-Storm – a temporary, localised electrical disturbance which obliterates all. This pic shows the after effects of that assault. Blam! Blam!

B-Movie buddies

As the game is a way off completion yet, the monster gallery isn't fully catered for. However a couple of them are worth mentioning at this stage. The spiders are pretty creepy, though not as realistic as those in Resident Evil. Better examples are the mutated creatures, presented as horse-headed machines, and a giant spider with a human head.

View from a missile

As you'd expect from Core Design, the landscapes in Blam! are pretty spectacular. Though not quite so spectacular as in Neon's Tunnel B1. You can see how it looks for yourself, but the fluidity of movement deserves crediting, if only because it had Paul reaching for a bucket. Only one level is properly constructed at the time of writing – the Train Launch – and this is the one shown in most detail.

Typical obstacles include this plane wreckage. You can use such debris as cover though, should you find yourself under fire.

I wanna hold your hand

Similar to Thunderstrike (Thunderhawk 2) from Core, there are 'assist' missions in Blam!. Again, as the code presented here is unfinished there is nothing as yet to show. However these roles include charging railway lines with electricity in order to kick-start a cargo train, then clearing a safe route ahead; the speedy rescue of a fellow agent from behind enemy lines; and the destruction of a spy satellite – routine Core Design game structure, only this time it looks much better.

HAPPY TRAILS

We'll leave Kim strapped to that thing for just one month longer, as Core expect to have Blam! turned around in time for review next issue.

Rendered FMV is almost standard in today's games, but is still distinctly separate from the game itself. Amazing Studio's plan is to merge the two... seamlessly!

HEART OF D

Elsewhere in this magazine you can find the review of Delphine's Fade To Black on PlayStation. A game which takes the pioneering mix of incredible cinematic visuals and platform gameplay from predecessors, Another World and Flashback, and turns it into an mind-boggling 3D adventure. On the flipside, we have Heart Of Darkness on Saturn. The brainchild of Another World's creator, Eric Chahi (who left Delphine to start his own company - Amazing Studio), this game also aims to take the Another World formula and push it into new innovative realms. However, with Heart Of Darkness the basic platform formula has been kept, although that's not something you'd easily recognise. The visuals, you see, are simply awesome! Every bit as cinematically ground-breaking as Fade To Black, but which one will prove to be the true successor to Flashback?

↑ All these are in-game shots. The quality is staggering!

HEART OF THE MATTER!

As you can see from the screenshots, Heart Of Darkness leans heavily into rendered graphics territory. Indeed, the game features some stunning cinematic scenes which unfurl the plot. The opening sequence shows the main character, a boy called Andy, misbehaving at school and being locked in a cupboard as punishment. Which, considering he's terrified of the dark, isn't very pleasant.

After school he rushes home to see his dog, which promptly scampers off into some darkness. Thus Andy has to face his fear by following his pet. So he rushes home, builds a rocket car and follows... into another dimension!

CAN'T SEE THE JOIN!

The actual in-game graphics are made up of rendered backdrops and sprites, which perfectly match the many SGI-generated intermissions. This cinematic illusion isn't ruined by start-stoppy loading times either. Amazing Studios have gone to great lengths to blend the two sections seamlessly. As the opening scene finishes (with Andy falling into a cave) so the game instantly begins. There's also a point, as you lead Andy up a cliff-face, where the FMV starts up. Suddenly we see Andy fall away from the cliff via an FMV sequence. However, this footage merges in as Andy is climbing. You don't realise you're no longer controlling him. That's how impressive the blending is.

↑ This is the aforementioned cliff-face scene. It's still under player control here.

YET ANOTHER WORLD?

HoD's gameplay is clearly derived from the pioneering Another World. A straight mix of fighting baddies, reflex-testing manoeuvring and intricate puzzle-solving, all chopped together with cinematic scenes. So far it all looks to be shaping up well, but we hope there's more freedom to the gameplay than in Another World.

↑ It's like Ed Lomas at work in his bedroom.

↓ The in-game view is very much like that of Another World.

ARKNESS

HEART CONDITION

While this may be one of the first times you've heard of this game, we've been waiting for it for a long time! Heart Of Darkness has been in development for nearly four years, and was originally scheduled for PC release over a year ago. However, Sega have secured the first-release rights for the game on Saturn, with PC now to follow. To date, the game is rumoured to have cost near £1,000,000 to develop. That's not without attracting its fair share of interest though. Both Steven Spielberg and George Lucas showed distinct interest in Amazing Studio's work at the recent E3.

↑ "What do you reckon, Spielberg old boy?" "I like it, George, I really do."

↑ "Just like Jaws, George."

↑ "Remember Indy, Steve?"

NEXT MONTH... LIVE HEART EXTRACTION!

Currently Heart Of Darkness is scheduled for a September release, but we've got our doubts it's going to meet this deadline. If it does, expect a full review in one moon cycle!

It's almost criminal that a 3D-wielding machine such as the Saturn has yet to get a decent Doom-style game. Well, video games justice is finally going to be delivered via a game engine far superior to that of Doom!

EXHUMED

Duke Nukem 3D. If you read last month's review, you'll know we love it! Even with Quake imminent, Duke has managed to stand tall, thanks in no small part to its brilliant game engine. Why are we blethering on about all this? Well, Exhumed actually uses the Duke Nukem engine, amazingly translated onto the Saturn! Running as fast as Duke on a standard Pentium, Exhumed is a superbly impressive 3D maze shoot 'em up. This all bodes well for the forthcoming Saturn conversion of Duke Nukem. But who cares about that right now, cos Exhumed is shaping up to be totally excellent in its own right!

ENTER THE MUMMY'S TOMB!

To support its 3D maze-exploring, multi-weapon carnage fest, Exhumed has adopted an ancient Egyptian scenario. Each level is an ancient, temple/ tomb catacomb affair filled with THE TERRORS OF A THOUSAND YEARS AGO!! In the early five-level version we've played, these mainly consist of annoying red spiders, wasps and birds, with a couple of mad stereotypically-clad magicians appearing further in. Expect the usual mummies and probably Anubis though.

There's some neat hieroglyphic texturing to give the tombs that authentic Ancient Egyptian look.

When you want to move onto another tomb, you just go back to your camel - Bessie.

Yes, this really is a light-sourced and fully texture-mapped scene on the Saturn!

Not a distant giant floating spider, but a small spider leaping right into your face.

MUMM-RAH'S GUN STORE!

You can always judge these 3D maze games by the quality of the weaponry within. Po'ed, for example, featured meat cleavers and frying pans. CVG judgement: not good. Exhumed however, has a fair smattering of decent armaments that blend traits of Duke Nukem and Heretic. Being an archaeologist type, you start off with a machete and pistol., eventually acquiring the likes of a flame thrower and M-60 machine gun. Clearly though, the finished game sees you uncovering Ancient Egyptian artifacts of power on your journey. There's the Cobra Staff, which unleashes a deadly green spray. The Ring Of Ra gives you naughty groping hands that fire out red sparks. Most powerful of all though, is The Manacle. Charged up, it explodes a near-smart bomb

FLAME THROWER

MANACLE

PISTOL

COBRA STAFF

MACHETE

RING OF RA

TUTANKHAMEN'S HANDY STREETFINDER

Maze-exploration is only fun if you know where you're going. Thankfully Exhumed solves this problem in a similar way to Duke Nukem, by allowing you to overlay a transparent map onto the screen. This rotates around, making sure you only steer upwards, making it very easy to negotiate even the most complex tomb.

LOOK, LIGHTING EFFECTS OVER HERE!

Exhumed's most impressive feature is its lighting. When firing off your weaponry, the walls glow accordingly. It's particularly chilling when an enemy launches a fireball at you. Even outdoors it lights the floor up. Brilliant, and more proof the Saturn can do lighting effects.

NOW WITH ADDED NECK!

One factor that makes the Duke Nukem engine far superior to Doom, is its ability to put one floor above another. Thus Exhumed's levels are quite complex. Moreover, you can look up and down. Great for looking at the lovely Egyptian sky.

Wow, you can look up this lift-shaft as you descend. Watch those spiders don't drop into your mouth though.

NEXT MONTH... EXHUMED UNWRAPPED

Sega are publishing Exhumed on Saturn themselves, which is surely a good sign they're impressed by it. If it features the level of ingenuity and action that marked Duke Nukem, we could have a winner here. Review next month hopefully.

Cheesy the rhino. No, that's not right. Cheesy the baboon. Nope. Cheesy the Duck-billed platypus. You know, somebody had so much fun giving this new character a name, they almost forgot to give him a game.

By the skin of his rodent incisors, Cheesy the Mouse (couldn't have thought of a more appropriate name if we tried) kind of slumps into some kind of platforming role. Whatever his creators were thinking at the time, the categories marked 'original' and 'ground-breaking' were not among those recognised as worthwhile. However 'successful formula' and '3D' would seem to have been flashing in neon. Popular opinion is that Cheesy is an okay mouse. We're reserving judgment until next issue, and finished cheddar code on a CD. Meantime a formal introduction is in order.

IT'S CHEESY!

The delights of the Cheesy storyline we'll pass on next month. In this short space, centre stage should go the mouse himself. Go Cheesy!

CHEESY WANNA GO

Stages are accessed by directing your charming, yellow, 3D polygon mouse to an area marked with an arrow. These sections are real-time 3D, with fixed view points.

Initially Cheesy lives up to his namesake and bounces on the heads of enemies. Armed with a gun, Cheesy no longer needs to bother as much.

CHEESY DO BANG

CHEESY ONNA MINECART

Another attractive 3D routine here, where players adopt a Cheesy-eye-view to tackle the obstacles ahead. Lean left or right to steer the mine cart.

CHEESY SURF MOUSE

This looks and moves very slick. While guiding Cheesy down the sewer, dodging gates and fallen pillars, fish jumping out of the water are blasted for points.

CHEESY PLAY SAFE

Pressing down enables Cheesy to get a glimpse of what's below him. Which is essential if you're to prevent him making too many leaps of faith.

CHEESY DOWN BELOW

This stage is a cross between Micro Machines and Smash TV, minus the cars and classic shooting action. Cheesy walks and fires in whichever direction is pressed.

CHEESY FMV

Why Cheesy is required to perform all these crazy capers is explained via high production computer animation sequences. Inevitably one is used to set the scene before even starting the game. From then on they crop up to illustrate the transition from one predicament to another. Care to know how Cheesy winds up with that gun surgically attached to his arm? The FMV reveals all.

Whaddya know! There are secret areas too. Not very big ones mind.

CHEESY OR WHAT?

Yes. The gameplay in Cheesy is much like everything else experienced countless times before. Still this could be what Ocean are aiming for - virgin territory and all that. Everything else we could say at this point would be bordering on an opinion of the game's quality. For that you must wait for the review. Can't wait.

We've heard of games transporting players temporarily to an imaginary place. But permanently alter someone's life philosophy? That's an altogether more serious proposition. Yet the only way to succeed in Kowloon's Gate is by adopting the Chinese art of feng shui, by which students learn to manipulate the currents of power believed to govern the earth. More specifically these are said to represent the ancient spirits of four sacred beasts, linked to the geographical features of north, south, east, and west. Assuming the credential "Feng Shui Master" doesn't feature on your CV, what are your chances in this cyber-punk vision of Hong Kong?

And some people think the net is complicated now!

How the Kowloonet appears to an addict...

Amazing-looking game! But it is the deep philosophy behind Kowloon's Gate which could shake your world to the core. "From Symbol to Expression", according to Director Nakaji Kimura, is the project's foremost objective. Ommm"

KOWLOON'S

STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND

In order to convey the rich storyline of Kowloon's Gate, Sony adopt two of the most popular forms of explorational gameplay: JPEG and real-time. This Combination lends a unique feel to Kowloon's Gate.

JPEG DUNGEONS

These develop Warp's successful concept as used in D, and their forthcoming game EO (Enemy Zero). In the case of Sony's game, loading times are improved to an extent where they go unnoticed. A Yin Yang styled cursor directs your path. Click on the place you wish to go, and an animated sequence depicts the transition from one area to another. The adventure takes shape under these circumstances, with all conversation and interchange of key items between characters occurring here.

☞ Hermaphroditic Wig. Whoever wears this may choose to become a man or woman. We dare not imagine its practical uses.

☞ Mercury. According to the Taoist philosophy mercury is valued highly by their alchemists for its potential to enable immortality.

☞ Pay attention to clues. Like, don't visit this man's barber!

REAL-TIME DUNGEONS

Once all the requirements are met in one section of the JPEG dungeon, gameplay continues in a 3D polygon environment. Enemies are encountered, and important items are found. Accomplishment of the given task in this situation is made easier by the presence of four Kowloon Navigators, professionals who know every corner of these dungeons. However the only way to employ their services is by making contact via the Kowloonet - Kowloon's electronic communications network.

GATE

FENG'S YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

You ought to be familiar with the Chinese symbol for light and darkness living in harmony – the Yin Yang. As explained earlier, the events which transpire in Kowloon's Gate are wider reaching than lining the hero's pockets or getting the right girl. No, the ultimate task is to redress the balance of feng shui in the world so that the Yang, the dark side, does not overcome the light. To further help you solve the mystery, the first important item required is a Lao-pan. This seeks out the locations of the four mythical sacred beasts said to symbolise the currents of power which course the earth.

SUSS THE GUILI'S AND MAKE THEM FLY

Evil which inhabits the city is referred to as Guili. Apparently no Guili launches a physical attack, but they do hinder progress. The trick is to find the route of this evil in order to destroy it. Guili does manifest itself in the form of evil spirits however, and that's when the game's exotic battle system – involving panels of Chinese Kanji arranged in a circle – kicks into play.

⬆ As kids, Sony's artists must have had a really tough time with kitchen utensils.

⬆ Ugh! This Guili really is grotesque! See if you can make out the various parts.

⬆ Antisocial? Me? Sod off!

⬆ I'm six-foot tall with...

@kowloon.com.yin

Once an access card is in your hands, Kowloonet opens its cyber corridors to explore. Here is where much of that walled city's status is discussed openly, so is a gold mine of helpful information. It's also a great place to make contact with "Netizens" who might affect the course of your adventure. Dungeon Ushers, for example. Some important characters will only talk through the Net – you can't meet them anywhere else. Plus extended time on the wire triggers a new series of events. Basically it pays to get hooked.

SET TO STUN?

Sony have announced a July release date for Kowloon's Gate. So CVG ought to have an imported version in time for a good play through next month. This gives you just enough time to raid the library for every book on Chinese philosophy you can reasonably digest!

⬆ She looks pretty, sure. But can you trust her?

One of the industry's most celebrated names has returned, with the product of over 15 years personal research into the very essence of gameplay. Plus some very interesting technology which allows it to happen.

Quintessential Art of Destruction

During the 1980s, being the coolest on Choplifter was akin to being the hottest player on the latest Street Fighter. Sure Choplifter is basic, but as we all know the simplest games often develop the most complex strategies. Now the essence of Choplifter has been transported into whole new universe, thanks to computer gaming legend Jon Ritman - responsible for Matchday, it's sequel, and Head Over Heels. Jon also authored the classic development system for Rare, which enabled the classic Donkey Kong Country series to take shape. Quintessential Art of Destruction (QAD) is Jon Ritman's first game to be released by his own company, Cranberry Source. Co-founder Jon Cook, who has represented some of the biggest names in games, invited CVG down to the CS offices.

CHOPLIFTER FOR THE 90S

No need to worry about the storyline too much with QAD. The idea is simply to collect 75% of hostages roaming some alien landscape, from the luxury of a cool spacecraft. And it doesn't matter if you shoot 25% of them to make it easier! As well as the anti-aircraft fire, adversity takes the form of another CPU or player-controlled spacecraft with the same mission objective as you. It's simple, but frantic as heck.

Beyond Landscape

Not polygons or voxels here. Jon's proprietary technology allows for superior Depth-Cuing and greater detail at closed-range. Backgrounds scale fluidly into the foreground, and the overall effect is more natural than badly clipped polygon landscapes.

ENID

Generates random scenarios for games - a 'dungeon keeper' of sorts. In QAD this applies to the ridiculous storyline which changes each time.

IN THE BEGINNING

What you're looking at on this page is a completely new game technology, invented by Jon Ritman. It's not specific to QAD, meaning Jon intends to apply Beyond Landscape™, Polar Sprout™, and ENID™ (Engine of Narrative Invention and Destruction) to other CS titles in development.

Polar Sprout

Jon wanted QAD to introduce hundreds of enemies into the battle, so created his own graphics engine to do the job. Polar Sprouts are described by Jon as 3D not specific to QAD, meaning Jon intends to apply Beyond Landscape™, Polar Sprout™, and ENID™ (Engine of Narrative Invention and Destruction) to other CS titles in development.

QUINTESSENTIAL COVERAGE CONTINUES

Once CVG has QAD to toy around with for any length of time, we'll bring you more in depth coverage. Hopefully to discover that Jon Ritman has returned to glory. The promise is there, and QAD is only the beginning.

Hard to believe it was only two months ago that we showed you first pictures of this incredible action game. But in this short space of time, events have progressed at an mind-boggling rate. And nothing has been more surprising – or exhilarating – than the news that NiGHTS' Japanese launch date is (or in your case – was) the 29th June, not September worldwide as we were previously told. Suddenly, this abstract dream-flying concept has become a full-blown rollercoaster-pin-ball-speed-challenge! If this is what Sonic Team's dreams are like, they must wet their beds every night and have shot-white hair. If Sonic could fly, this is how it would be – with a rocketpack strapped to his back!!

By the time you read this, NiGHTS will have already been released in Japan! We've played a near-finished version of Sonic Team's masterpiece, and now we're gonna tell you all about it! Face the G-force and scream!

NiGHTS

AN EXPLANATION IN FULL!

From what we can gauge, it seems some people's conception of how NiGHTS plays is a good deal different from the actual thing. Maybe we haven't explained it clearly enough, or perhaps you've been reading the wrong magazines. Whatever, with the final in-game features now present, we can clarify the situation. It's all a lot simpler than it looks!

THOSE PESKY KIDS!

As we've explained before, when playing as either Claris or Elliott you have total freedom to wander around the 3D landscape. However, the only real objective here is to follow the arrow, find NiGHTS, and take to the air!

↑ Off you go, little fella. Go and find NiGHTS!

↑ She's heading the wrong way!

↑ Caption in here. in here. in here cap

HOW NiGHTS IS CONTROLLED!

Once NiGHTS is located (which isn't very hard), the kid merges with him and the game proper begins. This is the bit people seem to be getting the wrong idea about. The gameplay here ISN'T 3D! NiGHTS can fly left or right, soaring around the screen in a fashion similar to Ecco the Dolphin!

↑ The analogue D-pad provides an amazing degree on steering control!

PLEASE SELECT A RACE COURSE!

These pictures should give you a better idea of how NiGHTS operates. He basically flies around a set course. Within this circuit he's free to move up and down, but can't actually move into or out of the screen unless the course leads that way. There are four courses to each level. Once NiGHTS completes one, he immediately moves onto the next. Course maps, like the ones seen here, can now be viewed before each level, together with the best completion score for each one. It's like Time Attack all over again!

WHAT YOU DO!

Perhaps you think this whole course concept sounds a bit naff. Perhaps you want NIGHTS to steer around in total 3D. Well, you don't know what you're talking about! This game is so fast-paced and manical that if you could go where you wanted, you'd be completely lost. The horizontally-scrolling gameplay though, is essential to give the game a Sonic speed-test feel. It's all about racing, collecting and performing flashy stunts. Here's a rundown of the minimum requirements of each course.

↑ NIGHTS is off! His mission: to collect silver balls (signifying dream energy) dotted around the course.

↑ Each one picked up registers in the now-present on-screen indicator at the top-left. Notice NIGHTS is on a time limit.

↑ The balls need to be dropped off at this floating structure. A meter appears to show how many more balls are needed.

↑ Once enough have been collected, the structure explodes. NIGHTS is given a coloured gem and Bonus Round flashes on-screen.

↑ NIGHTS has to return the gem to his palace. All the balls have been replaced, only now they're gold. This is the Bonus round! Collect as many balls in the remaining time!

↑ Back at the palace! Your chips (gold balls) are counted and performance rated (it's not A, we just took the picture as it spun round.). Course Two opens up.

↑ At the end of the level your overall rating is calculated from your course average. A dismal D in this case. Never mind, onto the boss...

MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE!

There's far more to NIGHTS than just the basic objectives. All manner of score-multiplying tricks and secret rewards can be uncovered. We won't even pretend to understand everything we've seen. Things just happen! Wait until next month though!

↑ Collecting chains of anything, or flying through rows of rings is rewarded by 'Link' scoring. You can loop around objects too, to suck in a chain of points.

↑ This stunt ribbon is ace. The music changes and for a brief time tricks are rewarded. Loops, figure-eights, fantastic sixes, dances - reckon you're up to it?

↑ Certain actions yield icons. Expect something similar to the awesome Sonic 3 power-ups.

→ If time runs out before the course is completed, NIGHTS separates from the kid, who falls, losing their silver balls. You now have to steer them about, picking the balls up and delivering them to the structure.

OUT OF TIME!

↑ You don't turn back into NIGHTS until you've returned the gem to the palace. It's painfully slow after all that flying, and tense too, as the spectre of reality threatens to wake you up!

ALL THE LEVELS FINALLY REVEALED!

And we've got names for everyone of them! For each kid, there are three levels which have to be completed in order. Bizarrely, when you complete each one the game finishes and you have to go into your saved position to play the next one. We've yet to see each level completed at C or above. Our reckoning is, if you do, secret goodies are revealed. Meep.

SPRING VALLEY

↑ Land hangs magically above. As NIGHTS rotates around a rock the screen spins about!

↑ Definitely the most beautiful level. Rainbow in the distance, waterfalls you can splash through.

↑ NIGHTS is blasted up to the next bit of course, as leaves swirl about him! It looks brilliant!

MYSTIC FOREST

↑ Claris can wade through the murky swamps. On foot the levels are too vast!

↑ Bouncing off the vines accelerates the action!

↑ Collect enough stars on a certain section, and this vault opens up.

↑ ...revealing a bonus cave complete with stunt ribbon!

SPLASH GARDEN

↑ Massive water bubbles hang in the sky. When NIGHTS passes through them, he briefly gains flippers!

↑ But that's nothing compared to the full-on underwater section.

↑ A strong current sends him through an into-the-screen tunnel section.

↑ There's a brilliant bit where the game switches to a top-down view. Look, it's a working flower-garden clock!

CHECKPOINT 1:
CONTROL SYSTEM

It's amazing the difference the analogue pad makes to controlling NIGHTS. Delicate spins and twists can be performed. Plus, the L and R buttons can be used for different techniques. You wait, real NIGHTS masters will wield amazing control!

↑ You can make him brake, flick up his leg, roll over. Beg for food.

CHECKPOINT 2:
A-LIFE

We've witnessed brief examples of Sonic Team's Artificial Life system. Little Nightopians were born. We wiped out a few of them. They played us tunes and, best of all, a hill grew in front of us. Living landscape!

↑ These guys are your friends. But you can kill 'em if you want!

FROZEN BELL

↑ Bobsleigh madness!

↑ Check out this train...

↑ It pulls into the station and look, little Nightpians are waiting and waving!

↑ The incredible icy landscapes of the Frozen Bell look incredible. Realistic terrain with surreal objects thrown into the mix!

THE SOFT MUSEUM

This level is amazing! The floor warps and ripples like it's made of rubber.

And wait until you go inside... The Soft Museum!

STICK CANYON

Industrial madness that wees on Sonic's Chemical Plant Zone.

And you haven't seen the bit where NIGHTS gets magnetised and everything sticks to his body. Nuts!

↑ The characters are light-sourced. And look, misting effects too!

CHECKPOINT 4:
BOSSES

We've already revealed two of the bosses, a giant snake and a fat woman called Puffy. Now meet Reala, NIGHTS' opposite and equal. A scary boss, who we'll cover more next month.

↑ Evil, evil, evil, evil, evil, evil.

↑ Please win NIGHTS!

CHECKPOINT 5:
TWO-PLAYER!

Yes, there's a split-screen battle option! We're not going to reveal too much, but just look who you get to play!

↑ Arch-rival combat in the very heart of Nightmare! Great stuff!

CHECKPOINT 3:
MUSIC

NIGHTS' music is classic Sonic stuff, only better. The tunes really do change to suit the tone of the action, switching from cutesy pop sounds to doody jazz, to funky guitars. Increases the madness!

NEXT MONTH...

YOU AIN'T GETTING NO SLEEP!

The import reviews of both Mario 64 and NIGHTS! But for all their surface similarities, take our word for it, these games are leagues apart. NIGHTS is unlike anything else. Next month, CVG is going to crack the very planet!

ONE MORE MONTH 'TILL THE REVIEW!

PLAYSTATION GETS GOOGLY PLATFORM STAR!

COMING SOON

Nope, we haven't made a mistake. That's what he was originally going to be called! Whether Sony intend it or not, Willy the Wombat AKA Crash Bandicoot is being set up as the PlayStation's hot new platform star. Now we'll be honest with you. When we first saw the chap - googly-eyes, tongue lolling out, bandy-legged gait - we weren't exactly impressed. Thoughts of a hokey hilly-billy voice, matching bandicoot girlfriend in blonde wig, and evil professor-type villain (who kidnaps innocent animals) filled our minds. And we were right on all accounts. Yep, Crash Bandicoot is totally predictable, except in one respect - we didn't expect it to be fun, which it is! G-golly! Hyuk!

WALKING THE DOG

From the screenshots, you may think Crash Bandicoot is competing with Mario 64 and Jumping Flash 2 in the 3D platform game stakes. But no. While the graphics are polygon-generated, the gameplay is definitely of the 2D variety. Classic running-in-one-direction stuff, dodging obstacles, bashing baddies and smashing open crates. However, to add a new slant to the traditional proceedings, the game is split into two linear styles. There's the usual running from left-to-right routine and, more commonly, a 'follow the path into or out-of the screen' affair. Don't be fooled by the different angle though, you can't go lumbering off through the foliage!

⬆ Despite its linear gameplay, the views in CB are stunning. This waterfall pans below in awesome 3D!

Pack away your breakable objects, lay down a bit of old straw and put a bucket out to collect his dung. Yep, the all-new PlayStation superstar has arrived. Meet Willy the Wombat. Hyuk-hyuk-hyuk! Burp.

CRASH BANDICOOT

RUNNING LEVELS!

⬆ Rolling wheels are just some of the obstacles. ⬆ A fork in the stage. W-which way, hyuk hyuk? ⬆ Oiv finished da level. Gee, golly, shucks, snuffle.

MANOEUVRING LEVELS!

⬆ The side-on stages give a wider view of the action. ⬆ Flames and spiky pillars. The usual stuff! ⬆ The backgrounds are still impressively 3D.

THE MAP!

Since the days of Mario World, it's been the done thing to have a stage select map. Crash can backtrack and redo any levels he's already completed. Useful for going back to get extra lives. The 3D spinning island is impressive too, although in the early version of the game we've seen, it takes time out to load it in!!

BANDICOOT ATTACK!

Crash Bandicoot is clearly a game that intends to appeal by being completely familiar. Anyone who's played ANY platform game before will find Crash an immediately controllable character. He has a spinning attack similar to Tazmania, and jumps like Cool Spot. Which, of course, doubles into a stomp attack for popping baddies or busting open crates.

Spinning for a few seconds, he can be guided like a spinning top.

Good for exploding walls of crates, revealing loads of fruit!

A nice flip-jump from the Cool Spot school of bendiness.

In this instant, he's gone and jumped on a TNT crate. Typical.

FRUITS OF THE FOREST!

You can't be a platform character and not have things to collect throughout each level. So Crash collects... fruit. Papua New Guinea Peaches or something. And yes, you get extra lives if you get enough of them

PIG-RIDING FUN!

Most of the levels we've played were jungle path levels, with a few Aztec-style fortress stages in-between. However, the finished version promises 28 stages with six bosses. From early sketches we've seen, family favourites such as 'the mincart level' may well surface. The best stage we've seen so far has Crash riding a wild pig at speed!

River-negotiating, lily-jumping shenanigans.

Indiana Jones-stylee ball-escaping escapades ahoy!

High-speed pig-related thrills and spills! Oink, oink!

Papu Papu, the first boss, tries to whack you with his staff!

NEXT MONTH... BANDICOOT SEASON!

Although the version of Crash Bandicoot we've seen, seemed nearly complete, the game isn't set for release into around October, to coincide with the pre-Christmas rush. Nonetheless, we'll keep you informed on any developments.

While Paul was over in America to cover E3, he was invited by Konami to take a look at two key titles in development. This involved visiting 2nd-party developers 47-Tek in San Francisco, then a further pilgrimage to the sacred in-house R&D at Chicago. In both places our intrepid Editor had his eyes and ears well and truly blasted! Here's what he came back with.

↑ This is Karambi, who was raised by hunting cats.

↑ Here's some real fighting action from Kumite.

KONAMI R&D

Why would a huge company like Konami assign a major project to a little-known San Francisco development team? Well, it started when Konami decided to publish their own 3D fighting game. But not just to equal Tekken or Virtua Fighter, but to produce the world's first true 3D fighting game. 47-Tek have been breaking a lot of ground with 3D technology for almost three years. They also share a combined total of 35 years experience within the various martial arts disciplines, and profess to a "long-time fascination with Japanese animation and science fiction." You could say that 47-Tek have a destiny to make this game. It's title? KUMITE!

To date nobody has explored 3D fighting in the way that 47-Tek have with Kumite. For Director Derek Mitchell, himself a third-degree black belt in Tae-Kwon-Do, it is important that his game portray martial arts in their truest sense. To this end 47-Tek have concentrated on developing these key factors:

"WE ARE WOEFULLY UNHAPPY WITH MOST FIGHTING GAMES ON THE MARKET. LOOKING AT IT FROM A MARTIAL ARTIST'S STANDPOINT. PRIMARILY BECAUSE YOU DON'T HAVE FREE RANGE OF MOVEMENT." DEREK MITCHELL, 47-TEK

X-ING

In any form of one-on-one combat, it is never the case where moves take place on a 2D plane. The most sensible thing to do when being attacked is to side-step out of the way. Those who know what they're doing may side-step toward, or away from their opponent, then execute a technique of their own. This is called X-ing because if the action were viewed from above this is the pattern you would see. Introducing this crucial element has enabled 47-Tek to clearly distinguish Kumite from any other fighting game out there.

SPECIAL FEATURE

X-ING IN

Imagine that the opponent is throwing a punch with his right arm. A savvy fighter may 'X' forward and to the right, stepping in to hook the attacker with a left to the stomach.

X-ING OUT

Moving away and to the side from an attack leaves fighters with some entertaining options. You could trip someone who has gone for a high kick. Or retaliate with a powerful hook or roundhouse.

"OUR ARTISTS HAVE TO KNOW HOW A BODY MOVES, BECAUSE WE'RE NOT USING MOTION CAPTURE."

DEREK MITCHELL ON WHY ALL 47-TEK DESIGNERS ARE REQUIRED TO LEARN MARTIAL ARTS.

KATA FRAMING

The world's best fighters are able to confuse challengers with misleading techniques. 47-Tek have identified three key elements to any attack: the Salute, or Ready position; the Transitional; and the Finish. For Kumite to imitate a true martial artist, and to enable players to tap into this way of thinking, 47-Tek have mapped these three stages into all moves for all characters. This technique is called "Kata Framing", where three frames are used to plot a move, and the computer interpolates all the rest. Essentially this allows players to custom their moves on the fly, according to Derek "Every move in the game can be transitioned into every other move." For example, a Side Kick to the stomach shares the same transitional as a Push Kick to the face. Users can interrupt one with another from the second frame. "If it looks like a front kick, but hits like a round kick, then you get a point. That's the way to win."

Another advantage of these transitional positions is the possibility of withdrawing altogether, and switching to something completely different. In order to achieve this, Derek and his team chose not to motion capture the routines, and instead relied on their combined knowledge to painstakingly plot all the key positions for all characters.

INJURY

Kumite's advanced hit detection system allows for all fighters to sustain damage. When a comparatively weak area is targeted by a powerful strike, it will become visibly bruised. Similarly in weapons-based combat, puncture wounds will occur. In both cases the damage temporarily handicaps a fighter

CHARACTER ASSOCIATION

47-Tek recognise how important it is to invent characters which players will care about. Street Fighter, Tekken, and Virtua Fighter all feature personalities that we can identify with or respect. That's why Derek and his team intend the Kumite challengers to boast a similar charismatic appeal. While at 47-Tek Paul was introduced to the two lead male characters.

MARSHALL

As you can see, Marshall is very proud of his Native American heritage. At the time of entering the tournament, this ex-Navy SEAL is working for the CIA as an undercover agent, busting drug barons and the like. "Of course the Mohawk's not regulation. But they make allowance for him because he's such a badass!", explained Derek.

Marshall's distinctive fighting style owes everything to time spent with the best Capoeiria Maestre in Rio De Janeiro - this after being inspired by watching his captors practice after being imprisoned in a South American hideout. He escaped during a raid. Marshall's technique is coloured by his early training in the art of Savate, which his father had learned from a French foot soldier in WWII.

Rated alongside the other competitors, Marshall is noticeably the most balanced character. He is good at close-quarters exchanges, and his acrobatic skill is second only to the female character Lu.

Here's Marshall demonstrating his high kicks.

KARAMBI

Created to be the bad guy of the tournament. Also 47-Tek used Karambi to demo the weapons element of Kumite. This character derives his name from his chosen tool of destruction: "Tiger's Claw", aka the Karambit. This is a sharp hook which protrudes from between the user's fingers, and is used to tear or drag opponents painfully around. At last year's Kumite, Karambi emerged from the Sumatran wilderness of Indonesia to become the champion.

This mysterious character's origins are all explained as rumours, one of which tells of his being raised by hunting cats in the jungle before being taken under the wing of a legendary Penjat Silat Pandekar (Master). The rumour continues with Karambi having his lessons based around the natural grace of a tiger in the hunt. The result: "a perfect warrior, with the ferocity of a Bengal... tempered by years of Martial discipline."

To guarantee his chances of retaining his title, the six feet five inches tall, 250 lbs warrior has studied other Martial disciplines - among them the softer Kung Fu styles such as Hop Gar, and Tai Chi Chuan. He has adopted elements of each for his own repertoire, but the intention is that nobody can surprise him!

DOPPELGÄNGERS!

ADDITIONAL CHARACTERS

Though Konami are limiting the amount of information to be released on Kumite, we are able to reveal something of the other fighters in the game. Remember these models are "place keepers" meaning that they are very early mock-ups. - In fact they only took seven days to complete in time for E3!

MASTER LO

CHINESE KUNG FU STYLE.
Can take on armies using his Shaolin training.

LU

WHITE CRANE.
The original Chinese super-heroine, raised by monks.

KIM

TAEK WAN DO
Fights to the tune of Korean disco.

MORGAN

AMERICAN KEMPO STYLE.
Flashy American Kick Boxer, complete with Stars and Stripes!

REESE

TYSON/ROCKY STYLE BOXER.
Spent some time in prison where he learned to fight really dirty!

YAMASHIDA

KENDO AND KEMPO (WEAPON = BOKEN)
Sophisticated Japanese business woman.

"TRUE-TO-LIFE MOTION, THAT'S WHAT WE ARE TRYING TO CREATE. CHARACTERS SETTING THEIR FEET ARE READYING THEMSELVES FOR THE NEXT MOVE. ONLY OLYMPIC GYMNASTS CAN FLIP AND LAND LIKE A CAT - NOT SETTING THEIR FEET A SECOND TIME AFTER THEY'VE LANDED. ONE OF OUR CHARACTERS WILL BE ABLE TO DO THAT; LU. SHE PRACTICES ON PYLONS SET IN THE GROUND."

OTHER UNIQUE KUMITE FEATURES

- 8 sets of four moves for each character (sequences) - plus more - but user can create their own. eg Reese hook, hook, straight punch, and uppercut, when moving forward.
- Pitch and Sway algorithm - is the character in balance or not?
- Dynamic sound, relevant to the position of the fighters in their environment.
- The only fighting game that allows users to switch stance without attacking.

↑ This sequence shows Karambi demonstrating a selection of his attacks.

Two years ago, at a time when many Japanese software publishers were abandoning America for their home market, Mr Kagemasa Kouzuki – president of Konami Company Ltd – decided to stay...

KONAMI

COMPUTER ENTERTAINMENT CHICAGO (KCEC)

What everybody else saw as the end, Kouzuki-san regarded as an exciting beginning. If the Western world couldn't stomach another Goemon adventure, they could have Tiny Toons instead. Konami knew all about creating fantastic games, it was just a matter of getting the cultural 'thing' right.

Last year Konami Computer Entertainment Chicago was established, to nail the US market once and for all. Including Europe. Previously the Chicago building was a site for coin-op development (Lethal Enforcers, Run and Gun, etc). Now the consumer software division, under the presidency of Kenneth Dirnberger, is growing to meet the demands of 32-bit console and PC CD-ROM players. In just two years KCEC will grow to number approximately 200 people dedicated to research and development of awesome games. During our visit they were already laying cables, and creating extra space.

Already KCEC has had enormous success with their first title – MBLPA: Bottom of the 9th (produced by none other than Masahiro "Mitch" Ueno of Castlevania IV fame). But the wholesome family entertainment values of a great baseball game couldn't be further away from KCEC's next offering.

PROJECT OVERKILL

What was originally planned to be the 32-bit incarnation of Contra (The Maelstrom Wars) soon began to take on a diabolical life of its own. Instead of a two-player action game for boys, Project Overkill is now a blood-thirsty, one-player psychothon, guaranteed to earn itself an MA rating on release.

AT WAR WITH THE GALAXY!

Given a few more centuries, mankind is sure to find itself stepping on tentacles as well as other peoples' toes. Meaning it is more than likely that a planet not unlike the fictitious Viscera 5 will turn its armies against us. The way Konami's Overkill team see it, earth will be battling the Viscerans for domination on a galactic scale. But ultimate victory requires cold strategy. Which is where the four player-controlled characters enter the picture - a 21st Century SWAT team under no restrictions.

Their mission: to cleanse the known universe!

ALTHEA TIMMERON
EXPLOSIVES EXPERT
Players adopt a tactical approach with this female 'Transhuman' character. She's quite weak.

LANSLOW KREEG ARMSMAN
The most evenly balanced character in the game. His weapons power-ups are the best of all.

JENDRYK ESPION ASSASSIN
Begins the game armed with a knife, useful for slitting Viscerian gizzards. Stealth is his forté.

QUOGG S'SENTHINON INFANTRY
He's slow but weaker enemies are foolish to catch him up - Quogg is powerful beyond belief!

POWER CULTURE

Ultimate success requires players to complete the game with all four characters in one piece. Each time you elect a merc to head into action it's a win or lose situation: Win, and they emerge with an amazing compliment of weapons upgrades. Lose, and your team has lost a valuable member. Given the tactical element to the game, some characters are better than others for specific missions. So it's worthwhile ensuring that nobody goes down.

LIST OF ENEMIES

Blast somebody against a wall, and watch the blood go splat.

GAME OF DEATH

Project Overkill gains most of its aesthetic appeal from the graphic violence it contains. Graphic violence, and blood. Even when the ammo is completely spent, the mercs can slam enemies on the back of the neck with the butt of their gun. Or sneak up behind to stab them in the back. Crack someone over the head enough times, and their skull pops open. Blast a gook in the abdomen, and witness the fountain of blood shower from the gaping hole. Most disturbing of all, any bloodshed which takes place in an enclosed area is likely to paint the walls red. And where the body lies like a pile of offal, those treading over the mess leave bloody footprints behind.

Of course, you could tell yourself this is really tomato ketchup.

"IF YOU'RE LAUGHING AT THE FACT THAT YOU'RE ON A COMPUTER CONSOLE AND YOU'VE JUST HIT SOME POOR GUY IN THE FACE. OR THERE'S THIS GUY ON THE FLOOR THAT'S STUNNED AND YOU GO OVER; AND BOOM! THAT'S WHAT MAKES THE GAME SO FUNNY."
PRODUCER AND DESIGNER, PROJECT OVERKILL

PROJECT OVERKILL

PSST... BEHIND YOU!

Weapons-based tactics go way beyond just pointing a gun and shooting. Each weapon is tailored to fit the four characters' needs - who they are dictates the kind of power-ups they receive. In addition to that, Overkill runs an interesting line in explosive devices. Examples are shown below.

SPIDER BOMB

Wind it up and let it go. Wanders right up to the nearest enemy, the KABLAM! Players may control the time of detonation - let them sweat a little. Our eight-legged friend can even tippy-toe around corners.

THE CROW AND THE ROCK

As with all the great corridor games, negotiating this isometrically viewed environment involves the use of pass keys and pressure pads to open the road ahead. Spend time wasting the enemies, definitely. But in the end it's another part of your brain that's required to solve the puzzle of getting out alive.

FRAGMENTATION GRENADE

These are cool too, as they make a huge mess of everywhere. On impact they blow whatever it is all to pieces. The bigger they are, the longer they take to crack. But it happens. Eventually. And it isn't pretty at all.

DO YA FEEL LUCKY?!

PROJECT OVERKILL

BLOOD OF MY ENEMIES

Some of the larger enemies have great characteristics. Like the claw beasts who lunge and tear, or the acid spitting Boss creature who spawns tiny lava. Can't wait to bring you shots of the mutant, whose shell breaks to reveal its vulnerable fleshy underside. Bleugh!

HOMING MISSILE

Viscerans cowering behind monitors don't have a hope with homing missiles in the area. It's a favourite gag of the game's producer to stand facing away from a guy, then watch the smoke trail circle the area before - KER-RACK - making hash of a spook.

VERSION CONFLICT

So far the PlayStation code is furthest ahead. But KCEC have someone who they describe as a "Saturn Guru" planning the Sega version. Saturn should have no trouble handling the speed, but we look forward to seeing those transparencies work so well. As for N64, our friendly producer and director said that the amount of information required was almost too much for a CD - let alone a cartridge. And that's with everything compressed. Maybe when the 64DD unit ships...

TIME TO DIE

All Viscera 5 breaks loose next month, when CVG infiltrates Project Overkill once more.

"I feel you quivering, my babushka. Fear not, the shaven monkeys will never find our nest!"

As loyal cuggies know, Computer and Video Games just keeps getting better! This is of course due to the unique talents of the CVG team. And there's none more unique than those of Jaime Smith. We call him 'Art Editor', but only to keep the Pentagon off his trail. He would, you see, be of particular interest to their Troll Catcher Division, for that is what we believe he is! Jaime does not work in the office with us. We do not know where he dwells. But each night we take our freshly written work (together with a selection of screen photographs) and lay them out on the lawn, next to a saucer of milk laced with rum. Each morning we find newly-designed CVG pages in their place. And this we've done for months, never disturbing his nocturnal habits... until now! One night young Ed decided to see what Jaaymee looked like. We warned him never to wander into the garden after dark - especially not in his nightdress - but did he listen? Now he is gone! Worse still, our pages are no longer being designed! It's a disaster!

ONE QUICKIE WEDDING LATER IN TROLLTOWN!

Yes, Jaime was only visiting us nightly in search of a troll bride! Now he has found the prettiest of them all and doesn't need us anymore! Who knows what dank scummy bridge he lives under, eating hot meals cooked by his new wife! We desperately need our pages designed. Getting Ed back would be acceptable too. In fact, maybe if we steal Ed back, it would lure Jaime after him. But the only thing that could shake Ed free from the troll love spell would be a jumbo jet of M&Ms. And the only way we could afford them would be with money raised from your subscriptions. The month's events and software releases at a glance. July-August

Before we begin, there's good news from T.H.E. Games, regarding the UK Super NES market this year: To quote their communications manager, Alex Fitzgibbons, directly: "I can assure you that T.H.E. has HUGE balls, and will be bringing DK3 to the UK". So that's great news for all Nintendo 16-bit fans. Virgin are another company to have come up trumps (finally) with Resident Evil on PlayStation, and Night Warriors for Saturn. Finally the PC CD-ROM market is blessed with Geoff Grammond's F1GP2 masterpiece. So there you have it – a lot of what we've been wanting to hear for almost six months in some cases. And summer's usually such a quiet time of year...

As always this games listing is representative of everything released during the time we're on sale. The stuff we've seen and loved is highlighted in red. The stuff we've run away from is ruled out in blue.

EVENTS AND SOFTWARE RELEASES

WIN! RESIDENT EVIL!

It lives: the opportunity to win a free copy of Capcom's monumental game! For your pleasure this month, CVG would like you to transform yourself into the most terrible ghoul, then take snapshot and post it off to us. The sicker the better. Think 'grotesque'. Address to: SOMEBODY LOVES...THIS, at the usual address.

WIN! NIGHT WARRIORS!

Your Saturn is crying out for this game. It's saying, "Feed me! Feed me Night Warriors from Capcom! NOW!". If you were to have an imaginary conversation with your Saturn, how would it go? Budding script-writers apply now! Address to: MAY OTHER INVISIBLE FRIEND'S A RHINO, at the usual address.

WIN! THE GENE MACHINE!

Spot the connection between the three titles we're giving away this month (it isn't hard) to win yourself a copy of Gene Machine. Virgin were just dying to give copies of this away, so we just had to oblige. What wonderful people, eh. Address to GENIAL CVG, at the usual address.

TOKYO GAME SHOW

TOKYO "BIGSIGHT" (INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION CENTRE)

22-24 AUGUST 1996

What looks set to be the biggest computer entertainment software show of the year takes place in Tokyo, Japan this month. Dubbed the Tokyo Game Show, this is purely for the benefit of the general public – ie games players eager to try their hand at the latest software. And what a choice they're going to have! Two of the main sponsors are Imagineer, and Konami. Also very much in high profile are Sony, Sega, Namco, Capcom, Enix, Square, and Taito. But not, we must stress, Nintendo whose main event is Shoshinkai/ Famicom Space World, as always. Games on preview are expected to include 100% complete versions of Street Fighter Alpha 2 (Saturn and PlayStation); Final Fantasy VII (PlayStation); Virtual On (Saturn); and possibly Soul Edge: Version B (PlayStation).

We'll be reporting on all the show highlights – the games, as well as the hard-fought challenges. We might even consider bringing you pictures of on-stage Anime personalities, and live music. Whatever, it's going to be fun!

The awesome Flashback is like a brilliant movie – you get to the end wanting to know what happens next. Here's what...

FADE TO BLACK

Delphine Software have got an excellent reputation. They are responsible for some of the most engrossing adventure games around, as well as being well-known for their excellent animation techniques. Prime examples of these are Another World and Flashback, both of which were particularly impressive when they were released and still are today. Flashback is still one of the best-looking platform games, has an ingenious control system, a fantastic plot, and an atmosphere not found in many video games – it's a classic. Fade to Black is the sequel – Flashback 2 in 3D...

1 The robotic spiders explode in a shower of legs.

The introduction sequence shows what happens to Conrad B Hart after he defeated the Morphs at the end of Flashback. He floats in his small ship, in a deep sleep, only to be awakened when he's captured by a giant Morph mothership, whose occupants immediately lock him up in New Alcatraz Penitentiary. When in his cell, a message comes through from John 'O' Connor, a stranger to Conrad, who offers help... but why?

1 This bit's worth looking out for. In one of the bases, there's a bank of computer screens and each one's playing an ancient video game! There's Pac Man, Space Invaders and Block Out, but unfortunately they can't be played. Darn.

I HAF BIN EXPECTINK YOU!

During level 2, Conrad, John and Sarah work together to rescue Professor Bergstein from a Morph prison cell. Once Conrad finds him, the Prof needs to be lead to the teleporter to the next section, but this isn't as basic as it sounds. Seeing as the the Professor is getting on a bit, Conrad has to walk REALLY slowly to help the old man on his way. Impatient players who want to run on ahead will be driven mad by this section, as the Prof gives them a telling off whenever he gets left behind!

1 Here's the FMV professor...

1 And here he is in the game. He will wind you up with his moaning.

AWESOME RENDERS!

The excellent intro sequence isn't the only bit of rendered FMV in the game, there are lots of sequences during and between levels to keep the plot going. They are all of a really high quality, and make finishing a level even more worthwhile. Also, we can tell you now that this is a game with an end sequence worth playing for, unlike most these days.

1 These sections look totally amazing!

PUT THE DATACUBE WHERE?

1 These birds need to be stunned, but how?

The puzzles in Fade to Black aren't so complicated that they slow the pace of the game down too much, but can occasionally cause problems. This is an example of a nice, simple puzzle.

1 Easy, stepping on the floor panels makes blue healing plasma fire out of the wall, paralysing the birds!

These statues come to life when you're not looking!

Don't tread there!

TIME TO DIE

When Conrad is killed, rendered sequences kick in to show how he dies in close-up detail. They are all of excellent quality, like the intro, and make dying more interesting than usual.

Oh dear, too late.

Yuck! What a mess!

The Super Morph!

Scrape! Ough!

Crack! Blagh! The big bad boss kills Conrad in style!

Just stand in front of the panel, activate it, and Conrad floats in the air while his personal shield is recharged!

RECHARGE POINTS

The health system in Fade to Black is again similar to Flashback, in that there isn't a basic energy bar. Instead, Conrad carries a personal shield which takes damage whenever he's hit, eventually resulting in him dying. The shield can be recharged at any of these points, simply by activating the control panel.

TAKE TO THE SKIES!

To add variety to the game, it's not all just walking around shooting – this section, for example, involves Conrad stealing a ship and piloting around the inside of the base. The controls are quite tricky as the inertia of the ship takes a lot of getting used to, meaning that it's easy to collide with the walls and bridges to begin with.

Find the little space podule and initiate the launch sequence!

Use the D-pad to move up and down, avoiding the bridges.

Hit the thruster and go! Avoid flying into the scenery, and take out anyone who tries to stop you getting away!

IN THE ARMY... NOW!

Some of the later stages are particularly impressive, as Conrad joins an rebel force doing battle against an invasion of Morphs! Dead and wounded soldiers litter the base, and battle sounds can be heard from every room!

1. Conrad bursts into a corridor to find a lone soldier battling against something...

2. The soldier doesn't listen to Conrad's advice and is wiped out by a shot from the side!

3. Uh oh! It's a giant security droid! It only attacks when you move, so tread carefully!

4. Sneak round behind it and blast away! Those evil Morphs will pay for that!

CONTROL CONRAD!

The best thing about Flashback was that Conrad could be controlled very accurately, with a bit of practice. In Fade to Black, he is controlled quite similarly with all sorts of attacks and movements available.

Do you trust this cook? He claims to be innocent but...

When shot, he turns out to be an evil Morph soldier!

There's a friendly soldier! Go and have a chat with him...

Eek! It's a horrible Morph, disguised as a human! Kill it!

Death says: Bash him on the head... harder!

Death says: Release radiation on him. NOW!

No... burn him! Haha!

No, no... electrocute him. Yes, that's funny!

COMMENT

Initially I found Fade to Black frustrating. As with Flashback, there are very exacting objectives to be met, where just one foot wrong in a situation often means repeating a long series of set pieces again. In fact on the whole the control feels very heavy, and the 'camera' viewpoints zoom in and out in a very confusing manner. However, patience has its rewards and it's easy to appreciate how Fade To Black was considered a state-of-the-art PC title this time last year. Fresh challenges are met with every stage, and the learning process is graded perfectly. Though you may struggle to even aim the gun early on, later you will be ducking and shooting like a pro. Investigate immediately!

PAUL DAVIES

REVIEWER

In my opinion, Flashback is one of the best games ever. Fade to Black has a very similar feel to it, as the intro kicks off the movie-like plot and Conrad is immediately as versatile. The 3D graphics are very impressive - good animation and scenery, but the frame rate occasionally gets a bit slow - never enough to affect the gameplay, mind. The game becomes very atmospheric very quickly, as you interact with other characters, working with them to complete your objectives. The control of Conrad is great, with him being able to do almost everything you want him to, making it feel even more like Flashback. The game involves more exploration and shooting than Flashback, which requires more well-timed jumps, but Fade to Black still feels similar. The levels are really varied, meaning that you're going to want to play right the way through, and that's going to take a fair while. Fade to Black is a worthy sequel to Flashback which, while not being quite as good as the original, continues the story brilliantly.

ED LOMAS

Who says that golf games are only for dads?
This one's so good, everyone should be playing it – whether they're a dad or not!

ACTUA GOLF

Gremlin's Actua Sports series is a success already. There may only be Actua Soccer and Actua Golf now available, but before long we expect Actua Tennis and hopefully Actua Cricket as well. This game is similar to Actua Soccer, as the players are all motion-captured models, the scenery is all 3D, and there are loads of camera angles, and it's likely to have a similar amount of success. The game has been delayed for quite a while, as a new Peter Alliss commentary and new golfer models and animation have been added to make it one of the most realistic-looking golf games ever.

PRESENTED BY... PETER ALLISS!

One of the reasons for Actua Golf to have been delayed for so long is that a new commentary was being added. And it's not just an actor – it's Peter Alliss! During the game, he comes out with excellent criticism, as well as giving a detailed guide to every hole on each course! He adds a lot to the atmosphere of the game, as do Murray Walker in F1 and Barry Davies in Euro '96.

Before teeing off, players can walk around the entire hole to plan their shots. It's also possible to move the view high into the air to get a clear look.

Shots from the bunker are much harder than they look. The ball has to be hit extra hard to get it out of the sand.

It's possible to move the view around before taking a shot, then play from that angle.

HOW TO PLAY

Playing Actua Golf is fairly simple for anyone who's played a golf game already. The button is pressed once to start the power bar moving up the arc, pressed again to set the power, and again as the bar gets to the bottom, setting the way the ball is hit.

Take aim, set the power, and tonk it!

MORE ANGLES THAN EVER BEFORE

Actua Golf doesn't just settle for one replay view - it's got loads! They range from reverse angles, through moving TV views, to three-way split screen!

TEMPER TEMPER!

The motion-captured golfers move really well, and they've got a wide selection of movements. At the start of each hole, the players bend down to set up their tee shot, and always collect the ball from the hole at the end. When players do particularly badly, the character will shake his head or swipe his club in frustration.

TWO BIG FIELDS

There are two courses available in Actua Golf - River Valley and Royal Glen. Gremlin are also planning to release course disks in the future, each containing a famous course or two, and they should be nice and cheap as they only need to contain the course data and hole fly-by commentary.

Both courses look absolutely fantastic!

CREATE-A-GOLFER

One nice feature is that players can create their own golfer. Options allow players to set their skin type and costume colour, choose their set of clubs and save it all to memory card. Whenever the character plays, all of their statistics are updated and stored, and can be called up at any time.

Just like Jaime's trousers.

Just like Paul's trousers.

REVIEWER

I saw an early version of Actua Golf last summer, and it looked brilliant back then - it's hard to see where the extra year's work has gone. It plays very much like EA's excellent PGA Tour series (probably the best golf games available) only it looks even better. The 3D graphics make the courses look very realistic, and the sounds help a lot as well (trickling water, wind, sea noises). The new Peter Alliss commentary is also brilliant - lots of phrases, very detailed hole descriptions, and some funny one-liners! Two courses isn't really a lot, but hopefully the new upgrades will be available soon, and they should be fairly cheap. The putting is the only part that can be a bit annoying, as even three-inch putts need to be hit almost perfectly to get them down the hole. Other than this, the very slow loading times and overall pace of the game may frustrate some people, but that's all part of golf, isn't it? Actua Golf is the best of its kind on the PS, and a very impressive game indeed.

True enough, most wrestling games have been atrocious until now. But Midway's game features all your favourite WWF Superstars and MK-style combos too!

At last Wrestlemania: The Arcade makes it to Sega Saturn! The game has already made its presence felt on the 16-bit machines, as well as the PlayStation. Even the PC has had a look in. So it's about flippin' time! Wrestlemania received a lot of attention in the arcade for its creative moves, outrageous humour, but still tight-as-a-too-small-jock game-play. Yep, fun oozes from every pore of this game, which is pretty unbelievable when you think about other wrestling titles that have come and gone. When Wrestlemania hits the shelves, Saturn owners across the country should suplex shop owners for a copy.

WRESTLEMANIA

BAR BRAWL

There are two types of energy meters in Wrestle Mania. Stamina is represented by the Energy Bar – once that runs out your luck goes with it. The other is a Combo Meter, powered up by kicking, punching, and throwing opponents onto the mat. Once the Combo Meter starts to flash, and depending on which character is being controlled, combos of at least 5 and up to 24 hits are possible. Impressive eh!

BEST MOVES IN TOWN

Wrestlemania includes some of the wackiest moves ever seen in a game of this genre, but unlike many other fighting games the 'Specials' are incredibly easy to do. While this gives the game an easier access point for those players who aren't so skilled, there's still a lot of scope for pros to build on their potential. While activating some of these moves the word 'High Risk' frequently appears on-screen, indicating that a risky manoeuvre has been activated. If you're not quick enough the opponent will pull a reversal move and slam you head first on to the mat!

REVIEWER

The Midway boys have done good. Wrestle Mania is a light-hearted alternative to the likes of Virtua Fighter 2, Mortal Kombat, and most other hardcore technique competitions. All sound effects are brilliant; from the noise of necks cracking under the strain of awesome piledrivers, to the bone-crunching sound of the Undertaker's fabled Tombstone Smash. Eight distinct fighters boasting around ten moves each, plus specials, assures the longevity of the game. And every last one of those moves is sure to make you cringe as these giants are thrown around the ring like rag dolls. Wrestlemania is an ace conversion of a cool arcade game, and I am sure that all fighting game addicts would gladly add this to their collection.

PHIL DAWSON

RATING

It's nothing ground-breaking, but Wrestlemania is a sure treat for combat fans, and WWF followers alike.

↑ A well-built reef will attract loads of species of fish.

Imagine a massive ocean, created in 3D, populated by all sorts of amazing 3D life. Now imagine getting in a sub and exploring the ocean by yourself. Just relax...

AQUANAUT'S HOLIDAY

Aquanaut's Holiday was released in Japan over a year ago, but didn't get much coverage as no-one could understand what was going on, and no-one expected it to ever get a UK release. It can't really be described as a game, as there's not really any objective other than to attract fish to your reef and explore the ocean. Instead, it's more of a stress-relief tool, and a very strange idea indeed.

↑ Three whales at once – not a very common sight at all!

HEY, WHAT DO I DO MAN?

Aquanaut's Holiday is a very difficult "game" to explain. It's best described as a "stress-relief exploration" game, as it isn't like anything else available. Most of the time, players just pilot their submarine around the absolutely MASSIVE playing ocean, simply exploring.

By piloting the ship around (a bit like Magic Carpet) players not only discover loads of species of ocean creatures and strange underwater structures, they also uncover segments of the map.

Returning to base, players can add to their reef by placing coloured blocks in a grid. They can be put anywhere, so it's possible to build strange shapes.

As the reef grows, more fish are attracted to it. A bar on the map screen fills as you get more fish, and the "game" is finished once it reaches the top.

TALK TO THE ANIMALS

Your sub is equipped with four different sonars, which can be used to communicate with some of the life you come across. Some creatures can be frightened away, others can be made to dance for you.

↑ By using one of the sonars on this Octopus, you can make its head inflate!

↑ The clams open when sung to.

↑ These giant sea snails can be made to spin upside down really quickly!

↑ If you want to add to the "I'm in a submarine" feeling, you can change the screen options so that you view the game from an oval window, rather than it filling the whole screen.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE!

By exploring the ocean, you'll discover that there are loads of major landmarks. Here are just a few of them:

↑ Loads of pillars from a temple.

↑ The Great Wall of China!

↑ A massive ornamental palace.

↑ A big balancing rock.

↑ Massive turnips!

↑ A derelict aqueduct.

↑ Giant stone head.

↑ An enormous fish beast! Aaaah!

AQUANAUT'S AQUARIUM

There are absolutely LOADS of different species of sea creatures in Aquanaut's Holiday, far too many for us to list here. Part of the novelty of the "game" is that it's always interesting to discover something you've not seen before. Some of the rarer creatures are the pink shark and the giant white whale.

HEADING ABOUT MAP

The playing area in Aquanaut's Holiday is absolutely huge, meaning that a map is necessary. It only lights up areas already explored, but makes planning routes possible.

These buoys can be dropped at any time to mark important areas. Players can view them on the map and warp to them whenever they want.

Time to return to real life.

REVIEWER

This is a very weird game indeed. It would be easy to say that it's rubbish and boring as nothing ever happens, but for something to keep me playing non-stop for nearly five hours at a time, it must have some plus points. It's got a strange addictiveness - there's no "just one more go" feeling, it just seems necessary to keep playing! The graphics, music and sound can relax you almost into a trance, which means that the "stress-relief" part works really well. The game part of building a reef to attract fish doesn't seem particularly important when you've got exploring to do, and as there's no way of failing at the game, it'll be completed within 6 hours of play - something that could easily be done in one day. Also, the graphics can be slightly rough, as the cliffs and floor appear very close to the ship, rather than appearing smoothly from the murky water. Overall, it's something that can't really be highly recommended to everyone, but will get many people totally hooked. Just think - are you the sort of person that could spend hour upon hour doing pretty much nothing? I am, therefore I can - and I love it.

Soccer is the biggest money spinner around at the moment. That's why everybody is pitching (quack) for the ultimate package. At least, Telstar's plays as well with both feet.

ONSIDE

As anyone who's ever enjoyed a great footy management game knows, they are the most addictive SOB's ever devised. Give a man Championship Manager 2 and he'll quite happily ignore the rest of the world for as long as family temperament will allow. Likewise, a great hands-on soccer sim is guaranteed to provide a goal-tastic evening's entertainment for lads who are a bit low on cash for the weekend. Imagine a combination of the two! That would be awesome! And that's exactly the hook we suspect Telstar adopted when planning their Onside game, reviewed right here.

↑ Note the real advertisements.

MUDDIED UP

Players wanting to get stuck into a match proper have three options available: Friendly, in which you can play any team from any country against another. Knockout, in which as many teams as you like are entered into random play-offs. Then League, where there's an option to design your own, alongside competing inside of any of the four prominent European ones. There's a five-a-side option for all of the above, and in all cases the player names are authentic.

Select a Quick Play game and the CPU matches two teams at random.

DA MANAGEMENT

Don't be mislead, the management option is far from being as masterful as the best on the market, but is still more substantial than being 'just' another option. Onside isn't the first to try this idea – Sensible World of Soccer has been doing an amazing job of this for around two years. In the case of Onside you have nine main options, which include Finance along with Training, and the chance to participate in a crucial game if you feel your skills are needed. Just like SWOS.

↑ It's best to watch a few games before transferring a player who could turn out to be another Andy Cole. Know your team.

ALL THE RIGHT MOVES?

Just two buttons are used to create what is hoped will be footy magic. The main action button is tapped for general hoofing about or held down if you intend to pass the ball, in which case a direction arrow appears beneath the player's feet. For more speed, or to chip the ball, the other button is used. And that's it.

↑ When taking penalties you have one frame of animation's worth of time to judge the ball!!

REVIEWER

There are far too many footy games around at the moment, which makes judging one against the other very difficult. Unfortunately, Onside doesn't confuse matters too much as it is clearly below form. In case you care to read any more on the subject, here's why: Most importantly the game control is basic beyond belief. Players expect much more than pass, shoot, and after touch. And even these simple requirements are awkward to achieve. Aside from that the visuals are shoddy – as the Lego man taking the penalty kick ably demonstrates. Or is this a bonus game where you have to squint in order to guess the celebrity? Presentation is good, with an extensive array of options, plus it's easy to find your way around. However, Sensible World of Soccer kills Onside for value and game-play, and you can see for yourself how much better Gremlin's Euro '96 fares by comparison. Sorry, but the ads sell this game way better than I'm prepared to.

Do you explode typewriters with your overpowered fingertips? You could well be the next Olympic champion...

Our thumbs are still blistered and weeping from the last month's orgy of joypad abuse, brought on by the re-emergence of Track And Field. However, there's no time to heal our festering digits, because the summer sports fiesta isn't over. The Atlanta '96 Olympic Games has brought with it a licensed game of its own. A fifteen-event extravaganza laden with yet more button-bashing madness. However, this isn't just a lame copycat of TnF. Nope, Olympic Games is from US Gold, whose near-annual sports packages date back as far as the superb Winter Olympics on Commodore 64 (although it was joystick waggling in those days). And Ed Lomas' famous Olympic Gold technique (see last issue) was discovered through continual play of US Gold's Megadrive game of the same name. So does their first 32-bit Olympic license match up to the past greats?

EVENT-FULL!

Olympic Games' clearest selling point over Konami's Track and Field (apart from the official license) has to be the sheer wealth of events. Fifteen in total, ranging beyond mere track and field, to swimming, shooting, weightlifting and fencing. And with only four pages to cover them all, we'd better get right on the case.

100 METRES

The cornerstone of every Olympic video game. Exactly the same as in Track and Field, with frenzied (but rhythmic) tapping of the two run buttons charging up your power bar and pushing your on-screen sprinter faster.

It's like Planet Of The Hamsters or something.

OLYMPIC GAMES

JAVELIN →

Rapid tapping is needed for the run-up, however there's now a new action bar to contend with. During the approach, an indicator moves up this bar. You need to stop this exactly on the red mark in the middle, keeping the button held down to increase the angle of the throw. Fail to get this right and your spear-thrower either runs past the line or spoons his throw!

HAMMER

Although this throwing event starts from a stationary spin, the technique is much the same as with the discus. Rapid-tapping increases the power of the spin, and correct direction and angle are decided by precision control of the Action Bar.

⬇️ Swing around too much and you end up on your backside, with a feeble throw to your name. Hahahahahaha!

Try it before

Rent any latest release from just

Stamina bar time (see 400M)! Two lengths of the pool require you to pace your tapping. Keeping your speed up without losing stamina is tricky. In fact, hardly tapping at all before the final sprint, seems the best method.

Hamsters in trunks hit the water!

↑ Tapping the buttons in amusing rhythms keeps your minding from wandering.

There's a 70's Dirty Harry feel to this event. You have to shoot the centre of each target in a limited time. Each round, it gets harder as the time-limit per target gets shorter. With six rounds in which to increase your total score, this is a particularly good multi-player challenge.

It's like classic Duck Hunt, sort of. Moving around a shooting arena, you have to hit 25 'clay pigeons', but you only get 25 shots, which come in double-barrelled portions. The judge calls 'PULL' just before each pigeon is launched. Which has driven Paul mad, as he keeps looking up saying "Yes, what do want?"

Thankfully, this event doesn't use that old Heimdall shaky hands technique to increase the challenge. It does, however, make things trickier with added 'wind factor'. You have to judge how far out to aim, to compensate for any turbulence. It's actually quite tricky.

It might look like a one-on-one beat 'em up, but this is more of a reflex test. Dodging left and right, you need to get a swipe in. Various D-pad commands perform different lunges, but the best move is the 'reposte'. Wait until your opponent attacks and dodge, following through with a swipe.

🔥 The way your fighter behaves after an attack can be quite distressing!

Possibly the best event of the game, although it's very tough. Technique is broken into three sections...

First you lift the weight to your athlete's chin. As you tap the power bar, a 'jerk bar' increases beside it. You need to stop this at exactly the same height to succeed.

⬆️ Now you need to repeat this technique to raise the weight above the athlete's head. The judges have to deem the lift a success. If the athlete starts to stagger, you need to tap left and right to balance him!

The technique required here is somewhat different from that of the 100 metres dash. Under the power meter is another bar that represents your athlete's stamina. You can rap away at the buttons straight from the onset if you wish, but this decreases the stamina bar, and soon your runner slows down exhausted. The only method is to tap the buttons slowly, preserving enough energy for the final push.

Tap.....tap.....tap.....

POLE VAULT

Planting the pole accurately, adds to the difficulty of this event. As your athlete runs towards the jump area, a marker descends on the meter next to your Power Bar. You need to stop this exactly in the middle to accurately place the pole. Now, as you launch upwards, you need to stop the marker accurately again, to power your spring. An easy event at regular heights, but it's hard to break any records.

↑ Ha, the Bionic Hamster can easily overcome such pathetic heights.

DISCUS

Identical technique to that of the Hammer. However, your athlete performs less spins, giving you less time to build up power. The throwing angle should also be higher.

TRIPLE JUMP

Much more complex than the Long Jump. When you get to the jump-line, hit the action button to activate the first hop. An indicator now moves along the action bar, which has to be stopped exactly on the red mark twice more, to correctly perform the skip and jump.

LONG JUMP

Plenty of sprinting needed here, before hitting the action button at the precise moment to get an accurate jump at the line. Timing a good angle is also vital to get a good distance.

↑ Ooh, a little bit early, but not so bad!

↑ Muchos tapping applied here for optimum results.

↑ Watch that green indicator on the lower bar. Stop it correctly.

HIGH JUMP

Introducing an all-new meter – the Jump Bar! As usual, rapid-tapping is needed to power up the speed bar. As you near the jump, though, a second bar starts increasing. You need to stop this as near the height of your speed bar as possible, for the best jumping result.

↑ Here he comes. What a strapping figure of a gerbil he is.

↑ Yipes, not such a good measure of the old jump bar.

↑ But it's done the job! He's over the bar. Give him a tray of feed.

Try it before

Rent any latest release from just

⚡ The option screen is a challenge.

⚡ To finish, the flames go out...

⚡ ...and fireworks kick in. Yaay!

NOW TRY OLYMPIC MODE!

Uncoordinated button-tapping might be good enough for your average joypad joe, but for herculean D-pad daddios, Olympic Mode is the only option. This expert control method puts an extra marker on your power bar. As well as bashing the buttons really fast, you now have to maintain a really tight rhythm to keep the marker centred. If it swings too far to one side, you lose speed.

⚡ Don't let the marker hit those green edges, or you'll slow down.

SHADDUP!

If you've read our Olympic Soccer review (page 72, cuggles), you'll know that Alan Green from Radio 5 Live was employed to do the commentary. Well, in what seems to be a package deal, he's also done sound duties on Olympic Games too. Being a football commentator though, this isn't exactly his forté, and it shows. Perhaps his best line is "You'll notice the weightlifters have to wear a strange one-piece leotard. Goodness knows why!" What a fact, eh?

PARTY!

It's during the four-player tournaments that Track and Field is at its most brilliant. Well, Olympic Games goes four better, with a massive eight-player link-up. Yep, if you've got two multi-taps you can enjoy near-party sized tournaments. Especially nail-biting during the 100m dash.

⚡ Those little spinning sweets are supposed to be your medals.

COMMENT

Olympic Games has got an excellent selection of events, some of which are particularly good fun. As Tom says below, the pick of the bunch are the non-Track and Field events – shooting, archery, weight lifting, fencing – as they break up the constant running and throwing. The graphics are the same as Olympic Soccer (see next page) – the characters are a bit pointy and plain, but look fine enough from a distance. The Alan Green commentary doesn't work anywhere near as well here as in US Gold's footy game, as he only occasionally speaks and what he says is usually stupid anyway! The wide selection and variety of events, as well as the official licence, will appeal to some people more than Konami's Track and Field – mostly fans of the Olympics; but TnF is likely to be the sort of thing more average gamers are after – a simple, fun button-bash. What you need to do is work out what sort of player you are, and get the game that suits you.

ED LOMAS

REVIEWER

Okay, I'll answer the most important question straight off – Olympic Games isn't as good as Track and Field. But that's not to say it's at all bad either. As intended, the game's biggest selling point is its wide range of events, although not for the reasons you'd think. It's not the variety that's impressive – to be honest, most of the events play so similarly – it's the fact that the events not featured in TnF are really quite smart. The two shooting events, weight-lifting and fencing are all well-thought out and highly enjoyable. It's the regular events that aren't so good. What made Track and Field fun was the way the control system made you feel you really were doing the events – ie. holding down the jump button and releasing to flip over the bar. Here the controls sometimes don't make sense. Why do you have to stop a jump bar at the same height as your power bar? How does that relate? Likewise with swimming. Where's the tension in barely tapping the buttons to pace your stamina? Furious tapping throughout the gruelling distance would give a far more realistic sense of fatigue – in your own arms! The graphics too, are patchy, and the commentary is plain annoying. It's a coupling of all these things that put Olympic Games second to TnF.

TOM GILBE

football begin too!

When a company gets the exclusive official Olympic Games licence, you'd expect them to do a lot with it. US Gold haven't just made a game of the whole event, they've also made a game specifically of the soccer - Olympic Soccer. This means that there are no real professional players in the teams, but that's not really all that important - what matters is that it's brilliant fun to play!

OLYMPIC SOCCER

The rendered introduction sequence shows a young boy practising with his football in a street, occasionally flashing to a real stadium. The boy eventually ends up playing for real in the Olympics, scoring a goal in the final!

Headers and Bicycle Kicks are normally moves pulled off by accident in football games, when someone presses "shoot" while a player is in the air, but in Olympic Soccer, they've each got their own specific button, meaning that they can be pulled off at any time.

Volleys are easy in Olympic Soccer - just press one button when the ball is at the right height and the player will attempt a powerful strike in the direction he's facing. The chest and volley moves can be combined so that a player receives a ball, chests it into the air, turns, and volleys it at the goal!

BALL CONTROL

Olympic Soccer gives the player a large amount of control over what happens on the pitch. So much so, that with practice, the little men can be made to do just about anything possible in a real match. Almost.

It's strange that it's not normally possible to chest the ball in football games, but that's not the case in Olympic Soccer. When a ball is coming in at chest height, pressing the Square button will chest the ball, and it can be aimed to drop the ball into the path of another player!

Like Euro '96, Olympic Soccer has got a button which will perform an automatic cross from the wing.

Try it before

I said, Shaddap!

Olympic Soccer has got a commentary by Alan Green - the excitable Radio 5 Live presenter. He says the names of all the players, gives an introduction to each match, and explains what's going on very well. The commentary is also quite light-hearted at times, as Alan takes the mickey out of bad players and comes out with some very strange phrases!

"..AND THAT'S HALF TIME! WHERE'S MY TEA?"

Extreme Close-Up!

Olympic Soccer's replay mode doesn't have a wide selection of cameras - it has one totally free view. It can be zoomed and rotated about and positioned anywhere to get the best view of your favourite goals.

WHADDO I DO, BOSS?

Olympic Soccer doesn't go overboard with loads of complicated and fiddly options for setting up the tactics of your team. The options it has got are useful and detailed - it's possible to tell each separate player exactly how to play!

The arrow under the player points to the goal they should be aiming for.

REVIEWER

Unfortunately, Olympic Soccer looks a little bit rough compared to other PlayStation football games, meaning that some people are going to be put off buying it. They'll be missing out on something special though, as OS is one of the most playable football games around! It's incredibly fast for a start, but never so fast that it's not possible to control the players. In fact, the players are some of the most controllable in a footy game - being able to perform loads of moves which can be combined to create new tactics. The computer opponents are very hard to beat to begin with, as they perform flowing passing movements and set up excellent goals while you're still playing the long ball tactics required to win in almost every other football game! After some practice and when a few of the tricks have been mastered, it becomes a lot fairer. The commentary, as with all others, gets a little bit repetitive after a while, but it's still very good. All you need to do is play the game once and you'll see how good it is straight away. It's the best PlayStation football game, in my opinion.

CD LOMAS

Good, and that's OFFICIAL!

US Gold have managed to get the official Olympic licence for their football game, meaning that there are no famous professional players in the teams. In fact, the player names in Olympic Soccer have all been made up! The licence also means that the real soccer grounds to be used in the Atlanta Olympics are in the game, as well as the proper Olympic soccer tournament rules.

RATING

It may not look very good, but there's so much to learn and it's so fast and fun to play that it comes with a high recommendation.

Master the controls of a futuristic fighter plane, as you decimate the land of all those who rebel against FedNet – your superiors. An average day for a 3037 AD citizen of earth.

STARFIGHTER 3000

One of the most impressive titles on 3DO is Starfighter 3000. Mainly because, for a machine whose sell-by date looms dangerously close, it puts out some seriously impressive real-time 3D routines. Now this widely acclaimed graphical tour de force is being offered to the PC, Saturn and PlayStation masses, the question raised is how significant can a high-end 3DO product be to an audience who expect complex 3D as a minimum requirement.

STARFIGHTER UNIVERSE

Action takes place within a limited area, but a Starfighter's options within those confines are massively extensive. Pilots are given free reign to demolish everything ground or air based, excepting, of course, the mother ship which must be protected at all costs.

⬆ Fly into outerspace for battle!

SPACE HOT ROD

Your ship is a Federation planetary assault vehicle, named Predator Mark-IV. The control method is simple, with all directionals handled by the thumb pad, and only one button to fire whichever weapon is selected. Speed remains constant if nothing is pressed, but afterburners increase thrust should you need it. The Predator is enhanced with ECM (Emergency Counter-Measures) as standard, though this missile deterring mechanism is limited to number of uses.

⬆ ATG Missiles lock-on to buildings, and display a green matrix to highlight the target.

⬆ So long as you're vaguely on target the docking computers handle the rest for you.

⬆ The on-board computer 'talks' to the Mother Ship, which relays information for display on the strategic map. From here pilots may lock-on to most targets, and track them through a direction arrow.

⬆ Predator's powerful lasers not only scorch the earth, but are so intense they remold the landscape, in a process known as Terraforming. Just like you hear about in the movie Aliens

⬆ It's real-time 360° action all the way in your Predator Starfighter.

⬆ Pilots may target anything they choose and blow it all to pieces (of parsnip).

HEAVEN SENT

Fellow Feds on the Mothership occasionally deem it necessary to help by parachuting supplies to the war zone. Snatch these before they fall, and the Predator receives an immediate upgrade.

Wing Pods add more fire-power and more speed to the Predator. Usually they come in pairs, but solo pods are common too. They're fragile though, so don't expect to hang onto them if reckless flying's your game.

Megaship is a power-up reserved only for parachute drops. As the name suggests, this maxes out everything for a limited time – ultimate control, speed, and armament.

CRYSTAL CASTLES

Each time something is destroyed, at least one strange crystal-like artifact is left behind. These come in a variety of colours. By collecting them in a certain order, the Predator's matter-energy converter boosts the performance of the ship in some way. For example two 'blues' increase the number of Air to Ground missiles available; red with yellow tightens ship control; reds combined amplify laser power, and so it goes. It's down to pilots to memorise different combinations, as the on-board computer doesn't store this information.

Trash everything to exhume as many crystal power-ups as possible!

FORMATION FLYING

Later missions involve commanding a small squadron of Federation fighters. Pilots may dictate which formation is best in a situation, and may choose to adapt at any time. Another tactic involving team members is using the Mother Ship as cover. If the action gets to hot in the skies, move in close and she'll blast a few enemy fighters from the sky with her powerful cannons.

In Normal Formation fellow pilots hang tough until the group falls under attack.

Using the Fly Past camera to view the formation in action.

Have the squad take all the heat for a while!

Act upon this message quickly...

The Predator's destructive power is increased significantly.

REVIEWER

Technically Starfighter 3000 is an impressive piece of software, and there are many clever aspects that a strictly pragmatic reviewer could point out to its favour. The use of artificial intelligence; multiple camera angles; volatile landscapes. However examining programmers' potential is not we're here for, and there are many more reasons why Starfighter ultimately fails as a game. First of all it lacks style. The least constructive comment I could offer is that it looks like a great Jaguar game, but the best way to put it is that the landscapes, buildings, and craft don't look ready to have left the drawing board. StarWing on the Super NES has more chic. The ship is a dog to control too – sluggish and heavy, which doesn't help in a tight situation. Explosions are great for a time, but when it comes to immersing yourself in the game all that exists is extensive target practice under increasing duress. Any ingenuity is swamped by a lack of speed; foggy objectives; and little variation. I am sure that if the programmers worked on the look, and graded the flow of the missions better, they may have created something immediately more appealing with Starfighter. But, to my mind, there's just no fun in repetitiously demolishing polygon constructs to the tune of dire techno.

PAUL DAVIES

There's some pretty awful 'clipping' of scenery in the game.

RATING

An ambitious project that set too many brave targets and fell short of most. Extensive, but cumbersome all round.

Geoff Crammond is known by almost every single video gamer as one of the best programmers in the world. Here's what he's been doing for the last few years:

GRAND PRIX 2

Geoff Crammond's first Grand Prix game has become a legend. This sequel is pretty much as well-known already, as it's been in development for years – the original release date was about a year ago! This version is based on the 1994 season and features all the drivers from that year, except Roland Ratzenburger and Ayrton Senna, obviously. But the major difference is the excellent new graphics engine, enabling fantastic Super VGA graphics with light sourcing and shading to make the tracks and cars look incredibly realistic.

LIGHT-SOURCED BEAUTY

The car models in GP2 look absolutely fantastic, partly because they are light sourced. As they drive past, the light moves around the surface of the car, making everything look totally solid. From the close-up view of the driver it's possible to see the light reflecting off the helmet visor!

WATCHING TV

As with the first Grand Prix game, there are absolutely LOADS of views available! That's something we say a lot about games these days, but GP2 is just plain excessive! The main view is from inside the car – which gives the best impression of speed – but there are also views from each wheel, behind the car, looking out the back, straight at the driver, following behind, from the real BBC TV camera positions, spinning around the car – and that's not the lot! There are only two that are really worth using while playing, but a wide selection is nice when watching replays.

There's also a special "TV Director" mode which can be used to view the action, either when you've crashed out or if you're watching a computer race. A virtual TV director will cut between the TV camera views and in-car shots to give the best view of the action! What an excellent idea!

GIVE IT THE ONCE OVER, MATE!

With the car in the garage, it's possible to configure absolutely everything so that it suits your needs for the next track perfectly. Players can change the gear ratios, wing angles, fuel levels, brake balance, pit strategy, and more! All the settings can be saved, ready to be reloaded at another time.

AIRBAG AS STANDARD

One of the major enhancements to the GP game engine is that the cars can now flip and roll over, creating far more realistic collisions. Getting close to other cars is very risky as touching wheels can send one car riding over and into the air! High-speed crashes are more spectacular, as cars are launched into the air, spinning and rolling as they go! Also, chunks of cars and their wheels fly off to make for some amazingly realistic replays!

GRAND PRIX 2

REVIEW

REALISTIC DATA!

For the real Formula 1 fanatic, GP2 is heaven. Not only has it got all the real drivers, teams, cars and tracks from the 1994 season, it's got more statistics than normal people can handle! During the game, it's possible to record all the data from your computerised car then look at the data in the form of graphs. These graphs can tell you how the suspension on each wheel moved, how fast the car went around the corners, the engine revs... everything!

IN THE HOTSEAT!

It isn't necessary to have two PCs or a modem to play with more than one driver. As in the original game, there's a hotseat mode which has players taking it in turns to control their car, while the computer takes over the other player's. It's an interesting idea, and one that works fairly well, though it can be annoying to watch your friend driving well while your computer-controlled car drives into a wall!

Just look at these incredible cars! The graphics are so good and the models are so realistic that these graphics are almost unbelievable! The game is awesomely detailed, too!

The drivers lean their heads to the side as they go round corners! Also, all the suspension moves separately from the car! This game is just too realistic!

REVIEWER

This may (no, it will) sound sad, but I used to play the original Grand Prix on the Amiga for 100% race distances – that's up to 80 laps at a time! For a while, it was my favourite game on the planet, and I played it all the time. I, like many other PC owners, have been looking forward to this update for what seems like years, and I haven't been disappointed. It plays almost identically to the original game – supposedly the most realistic F1 car handling around, lots of helpful driver aids for beginners, plenty of views, all the real tracks, replay modes, and all the strategic elements of real F1 driving – but looks so much better than before. From the TV cameras in SVGA mode with all the detail turned on, it sometimes looks of photographic quality! The amount of work that's gone into the game is astounding – the tracks are so detailed that it's possible to learn the real things from the game, and the car physics make the cars move exactly as you'd imagine them to. This is by far the most comprehensive and realistic driving sim available anywhere, and is even great fun for those who can't be bothered to take it seriously. This comes very highly recommended to absolutely everyone with a decent Pentium PC.

ED LOMAS

RATING

Definitely the most detailed and realistic racing simulation that a normal amount of money can buy.

SHELLSHOCK

The premise here is very simple: Pilot an M-13 tank, festooned with heavy-duty firepower, into battle against terrorists. Players start out as a rookie in a group calling themselves 'Da Wårdnez', and are promoted according to performance in the field. Key targets – ground or air-based – show up on radar; and are hunted down, while taking out minor troublemakers. A neat touch is how terrain sometimes impedes the tank's performance, however the team leader's 'advice' is very annoying. In a multi-player situation, assuming the role of assassin feels cool as in any 3D shoot 'em up. Unfortunately this doesn't come close to the grandeur of Terranova, or match Duke Nukem for thrills. Hardly terrible, but hardly good by any stretch of the imagination.

FRANK THOMAS: BIG HURT BASEBALL

Acclaim are a big enough company to wield a baseball game, and handle the silence of a UK ball park without shedding a tear. In my book there has only ever been two hardball games worth recognising if you're not a big fan of the sport: Powerful Pro Baseball from Konami, and Ken Griffey Jr from Nintendo – both for the Super NES, and neither available in this country. What Big Hurt lacks, that those games have, is an element of fun – which is the perfect draw for somebody who would otherwise turn a blind eye. As it stands, Big Hurt functions well as a safe baseball game which will sell to fans on its name alone. But for most players this whole pitching and batting routine becomes monotonous. And besides the music and sound effects are especially dire, which I personally cannot stand.

VIRTUAL GOLF

Any game that proudly sports 'virtual' in its name, as if it's the latest buzzword in 3D technology, is clearly off to a bad start. But criticising this game's name is just being unfair, because there's far worse here to moan about. We reviewed the Saturn version of Virtual Golf back in our March issue, and were distinctly unimpressed by it. The PlayStation version is exactly the same. So, unsurprisingly, we're distinctly unimpressed by it. More so this time around. The problem with Virtual Golf is that it's just too basic. Although it employs a swing-o-meter similar to that of the PGA games, it lacks the depth or skill of the latter. The gameplay really amounts to pressing B twice, with no real thought required. On top of all this, the graphics only amount to reasonable, and the sound is, well bizarre is the kindest description. With Actua Golf in there's very issue, there's really no contest.

SLAM 'N' JAM '96

As we head toward the third generation of PlayStation software, it seems the next breakthrough in game advancement is to make them look crap. At least if Slam N Jam is anything to go by. Boy, is this one going to make you laugh. Goodness knows what licensed superstars, Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, think of their deformed monstrous sprite caricatures. More importantly, what do they think of their on-screen performance? Jerking back and forth like lobotomised freaks, they don't exactly generate thoughts of sensational basketball. Neither does the cooler commentator with remarks like "He must have springs in his shoes!" It's funny that the attempted special effects – such as the reflections which only extend as far as the ankle – only emphasise the hideously poor quality of this game.

STRIKER

This is pretty much identical to the PlayStation version which was released at the end of last year. The graphics are the same – fast and smooth, but with rough players. The sounds the same – awful commentary – and it plays the same – ball that weighs a ton and doesn't roll, power bar for shots, computer opponents that move twice as fast as you... This isn't really acceptable when the Saturn's got Euro '96 already, with Olympic Soccer and Victory Goal 2 coming soon. There's really nothing at all in Striker that is better than any other football game, making it a totally pointless thing to get. In fact, it does just about everything far worse. Don't bother.

SPACE HULK

Space Hulk isn't just another Doom clone. It plays differently, in that the player controls a squad of space marines rather than just one. This gives the game a strong strategy feel as marines are positioned and assigned tasks. The graphics are slightly smoother than the 3DO version's, but the game speed is the same – slow. This is because you play as a marine in giant armour, admittedly, but it can get very tedious when you're trying to get to the other side of a stage and it takes ages. There are loads of impressive weapons, and it's always fun to blow the Genestealers up the wall, but the overall pace and feel of the game will only appeal to a minority of PlayStation owners. Still good and well worth a look.

NEED FOR SPEED

Need for Speed on the 3DO was pretty amazing for its time. It wasn't just amazing for a home machine – it looked good even compared to Cruis'n USA in the arcades. The PC and PlayStation versions didn't make such an impact, as graphics of that quality come as standard in most games nowadays. However, Need for Speed has always been great fun, and the new Saturn version is just the same as the PlayStation version reviewed in issue 174. The only real difference is that the smoke from skidding tyres looks a bit rough. Otherwise, it looks just as good – smooth and solid cars, with good-looking tracks. The crashes are the highlight, as the cars can roll and flip, so there are loads of homemade bonus games to play. Also, there are a bunch of tracks, hidden modes (and a car) which mean the game's going to last. Great fun, especially the crashes!

SETTLERS 2

The idea of Settlers 2 is a simple one, even for those who've never played the original – keep your men alive. They start off shipwrecked on an island, and the you begin by getting a small town running. Eventually the game transforms, giving the player far more to do – sorting out the armies, trading, etc. Graphics are 'functional' and quite pretty too, as are the atmospheric sounds. If you ever get bored of the sound effects, just put a Metallica CD on (but not the new one) with the player option. Though it starts off a bit boring – just following orders, waiting to be told what to do – it gets better. Much better. Just like the first game, the little people can be left alone overnight to do what they want, and they won't all die. Slow moving, but top quality.

WIN A SATURN OR PLAYSTATION PLUS GAMES!

Spend that £199 on more games! That's the message on these pages, because CVG is giving YOU the opportunity to win a Saturn or PlayStation – AND that system's top three recommended games.

Just like you, the CVG staff were completely taken aback by the 32-bit system price crash. £199 for the games machine of your dreams! This marks a 50% price drop for Saturn since its first release, and a similarly mighty gesture from Sony. They want you as much as you want them, get it!

To boost word of mouth notoriety CVG is holding this competition. It's also a great opportunity to take account of the amazing line-up of games out there for both systems. We get so many phone calls and letters asking for advice on which system to buy, this mini feature has been long overdue.

Having read the magazine for some time now, you ought to be familiar with most if not all of the games mentioned here. We'd like to remind you of the best points of the best games for the best machines. Maybe you already own a 32-bit console, and need reminding. But we're quite certain many of you are still trying to make up your mind. These pages should help – especially if you get lucky in the competition.

SATURN

VIRTUA COP

This is one game PlayStation owners just wish they had! Coupled with the arcade-perfect Virtua Gun, it's a high-adrenaline, ear-splitting experience! What's more, even your gran can play it – if she's got arms! For gun-slinging experts though, this is one of the greatest highscore challenges invented!

SEGA RALLY

Still one of the most graphically stunning arcade racers around, with intense gameplay to heighten the appeal. And this is one heck of a conversion. We mentioned a long time ago how this game was hot enough to sell the machine. And from your letters we now know this to be the case.

VIRTUA FIGHTER 2

The UK may be slow to catch on, but VF2 is still the number one coin-op in Japan's game centres – where they take gaming very seriously. Yes, this is probably the world's hottest video game even now, believe it or not. We've been in love with VF2 since we first played the game on test in London. You must own it!!!

WIPEOUT

This game pretty much defined the PlayStation at launch time last September: Slick graphics, out-of-this world gameplay, and a hip affiliation with the club crowd. Wipeout sold on a ratio of almost 1:1 with hardware back then, and still people are wowed by it.

STREET FIGHTER ALPHA

An arcade perfect conversion of a genius Capcom coin-op. And with the many options available – Training Mode, Remixed Music, etc – in some ways PS SFA is even better. Anyway, you need to own this if only to prepare for the sequel coming to PlayStation later in the year.

RESIDENT EVIL

Visually and viscerally the best PlayStation game yet. Could easily become an all-time classic for the system. This is one game Saturn owners are longing to see on their machine. They might just get it too, but Capcom cannot promise the same level of detail. A PlayStation "must".

COMPETITION

At last! The coolest video game character around has returned to his home system with a new look!

FLICKY FIASCO!

It may seem strange that the latest Mega Drive game should have so much in common with one of the first released. In Flicky, players had to find all the little birds around the level, then guide them – either one-by-one or all at once – to the exit. In Sonic 3D, players find Flickys and guide them in just the same way. In fact, it seems as though the full name for Sonic 3D will be “Sonic 3D on Flicky Island”.

Leading a load of Flickys around at once can be a bit risky, as they fly away when hit by an enemy. It's often better to drop a few off every now and then.

YOUR MISSION IS...

The object of Sonic 3D is different to the other Mega Drive Sonic games. Before, Sonic had to run through to the far right of a level, but now he needs to collect Flickys to progress through the acts, as well as searching for the exits. It changes the style of the game quite a bit, but don't worry – there's still plenty of high-speed zooming around, crashing through walls and bouncing off walls!

Grab it before it has the chance to get away!

Jump and hang on to the giant ring to drop off the Flickys.

See the way that the yellow birds follow Flicky just like in Sonic 3D?

SONIC 3D

FORMAT: MEGA DRIVE
BY: SEGA
DUE: NOVEMBER

The Mega Drive Sonic games are arguably the best available on the system. They were responsible for making the machine so popular, and also helped boost the profile of video games in general. So it's with great excitement that we forget all that, as another Sonic game arrives! This time it's different – no more flat 2D characters, just lovely rendered 3D models whizzing around gorgeous 3D levels! There are also different objectives, new enemies and complete 3D movement, similar (in a way) to the freedom in Mario 64!

When a Badnik is destroyed, the Flicky inside is released.

Find all five and they follow Sonic around closely.

Then warp to a different part of the act and continue!

FIRST-CLASS CREDENTIALS!

The game is being programmed by Traveller's Tales, one of the most respected teams around. They are responsible for such impressive Mega Drive games as Puggsy, Mickey Mania and Toy Story, so an excellent feel and great control are guaranteed. All of the level and character designs are being done by people at Sega, overseen by the man who did all the character designs for the Clockwork Knight games – which is very good news as both of them had a great selection of characters. Also, Mr Naka Yuji himself – creator of Sonic the Hedgehog and full-time genius – has had quite a say in the project!

PUSH DEM BUTTONS!

The first stage is currently pretty empty, giving players the chance to get used to the totally new Sonic. He's moved around the stage as you'd expect, simply by holding the D-pad in the direction you want to go. For the first time in a Sonic game, more than one button is used – one to jump and the other to replace the Down direction in the previous games. This is because all of the D-pad directions are now used to move Sonic, meaning that the extra button is needed. Simply press B when standing still to perform the Super Sonic Dash, or press it when running to roll along the ground.

The arrow markers on the floor turn into treadmills which hold Sonic still while he spins quickly on the spot. They then release, launching him forward at great speed!

TREADMILLS

CANNONS

One of the features of the first zone are these cannons. Sonic can jump into them, then launch himself back out, over walls to different sections of the act!

Look at that temple! Is there a way inside?

These loops are just as much fun to run around as before!

There are already secret sections to discover. Here's a 1up!

Get hit and all your rings and Flickys go flying!

The Flickys manage to keep up with Sonic, no matter what!

When Sonic collects the Barrier power-up, all of the Flickys get one as well!

THE SECOND ZONE REVEALED!

The second zone, like the first, hasn't got a definite name yet, though it does look very similar to Sonic 2's Chemical Plant Zone. There are robotic mice and octopi to avoid, and high-speed chutes to whizz around. So far, neither of the two zones are totally complete, but the finished version will feature at least seven of them, each with two acts and a boss stage. Also, each act now takes longer to complete than the other Sonic games, and is broken up by having to collect the groups of Flickys, meaning that there are effectively twice as many stages!

Sonic warps into the boss stage from the end of act 2, then destroys Robotnik!

ROBOTNIK RETURNS!

At the end of the Green Grove Zone, Dr Robotnik appears in one of his spaceships and tries to crush Sonic with a giant spiky ball. At the moment, he's very easy to beat – just jump on top of him when he flies low to collect the ball.

An official Formula 1 racing game is bound to be popular. Every round of the World Championships is watched by millions of people on TV, with thousands more attending the races. There have been many games based on Formula 1 racing, but never before has a game had all the ingredients to make it the perfect simulation – real tracks, real drivers, incredible graphics, surround sound, rock music... and Murray Walker! And on top of all that, it's from one of the most highly respected programming teams in the world! We've been following the development for months, and here's our last update before the full review next issue!

Driving a super-powerful car around corners at over 200mph is something we all want to do. And now we can.

⬆ This view's easiest.

GO ANYWHERE!

The excellent 3D graphics mean that the races can be viewed from any point on the track, so there are loads of virtual viewpoint options. The actual game can be played from one of four regular views (like the four in Virtua Racing), and a rear view can be flipped up on-screen simply by pressing Down on the D-pad. There are also incredible TV views which look just like a real TV presentation of the Grand Prix, all the more so because the views are based on the real BBC TV camera positions!

⬆ Check the rear view!

⬆ TAG HEUER Official Timing

⬆ The cars whizz past the cameras at over 180mph!

TEAM PLAY!

All 13 teams from the 1995 season are included, along with the 35 drivers who started – including Nigel Mansell! It's possible to play as any of the drivers, and they make a difference – the Williams feels very different to the Ferrari. Also, the car models were created from real team blueprints, so they're totally accurate as well! During a race, you'll also notice how each driver's performance relates to their real-life counterpart's!

⬆ The cars look just right!

⬆ All the teams look exactly as they should!

⬆ The benetton has got all the right stickers!

⬆ TAG HEUER Official Timing

⬆ This horrendous starting line pile-up would cause a restart. Here it shows off the amazing detail in the distance. See the other cars?

⬆ Overtaking like this isn't much of a problem in Arcade Mode, but when racing seriously, this would put you out for good!

FIX ME!

In long races, or when you've taken a bit of beating and one of your wings has fallen off, you'll need to make a pit stop. By pulling in, you can access a menu with options to top up fuel, change tyres, and repair the car. Getting everything right so you don't lose too much time isn't as easy as it sounds!

⬆ Losing control in the wet nearly always ends in a pile-up, as the cars spin totally out of control – normally ending up back on the track facing the wrong way! Racing in the wet without any computer assistance is for true Formula 1 masters only!

⬆ Then get out of there as quickly as possible!

⬆ Get a top-up, change tyres, and do repairs...

INCREDIBLE SOUNDS!

Not only are the graphics in F1 incredible, as you can see, the sound is amazing too! All of the cars have different engine noises, which can be heard in awesome Dolby Surround Sound, providing you've got the equipment. Don't worry if you haven't got the set-up to appreciate it fully – there are excellent stereo and Q-Sound modes as well!

MURRAY'S MINT!

One of the best features of Formula 1 is that Psygnosis have managed to get Murray Walker to do the commentary! All the way through the race, Murray shouts the current race standings as well as going completely mental when anything exciting happens! It's incredible how much more realistic the game seems when Murray's talking – F1 and Mr Walker just go together perfectly!

"WAIT! THAT'S... THAT'S... YES! YEASS! IT'S A McCLAREN!"

RAAWKIN' IN THE STREETS! YEAHH!

Almost everything about F1 is brilliant – especially the music! As with Wipeout, Psygnosis have got three CD tracks by real artists. Here, instead of techno music, we've got the awesome rock guitar legends – Steve Vai and Joe Satriani! The tracks are excellent choices – "Juice" from Steve Vai's album

"Alien Love Secrets", "Summer Song" from Joe Satriani's "The Extremist", and our favourite, "Back to Shalla-Bal" from "Flying in a Blue Dream" (some of you may recognise it as the brilliant music from the original Mega-CD promo video!). As well as these three tunes, Psygnosis's in-house musician has created and recorded some fantastic music of his own. In fact, it's so good that it's often hard to tell that it's not either of the Guitar Gods!

ARCADE MODE!

As well as the realistic Grand Prix mode, there's a special Arcade option. It plays a bit like Virtua Racing, with no car damage and time limited checkpoints.

⬆ When playing in arcade mode, checkpoints are set up, with a time limit for each. Also, a rev counter and speed indicator appear in the bottom corner. As well as this, the car handles differently!

↑ See the flying chunks of car as you crash!

↑ Formula 1 shouldn't be this rough, surely!

↑ Oof! A bit close to the McLaren there!

↑ The wet makes it impossible to see a thing!

↑ There's even a bit of nice-looking lens flare from the starting lights above!

WEATHER REPORT!!

Before each race, the computer calculates the weather using accurate statistics for the area of the world you're about to race in. This means that it's far more likely to rain in Britain than in Australia, adding yet more realism to the game!

The rain effects are fantastic, as the cars spray up water from their rear tyres and a grey mist covers everything in the distance. Slipstreaming other cars is made dangerous in this weather because the spray thrown from the track impairs your vision almost totally!

↑ The Ferrari behind probably can't see a thing!

↑ The detail is gobsmacking!

↑ The mist trails are massive!

↑ The scenery is misted out.

↑ That's a dangerous move. You'll lose control easily!

SEVENTEEN TRACKS!

All seventeen (that's 17) of the real Grand Prix circuits around the world are in PlayStation F1! They are all totally realistic models of the real-life tracks, with all the track-side detail and every single curve and bump recreated. Because they are so accurate, anyone who plays this game enough will instantly be able to recognise the real tracks, and vice versa.

The Adelaide circuit is set partly on the streets.

Wipeout 2097

Wipeout 2097 is set 45 years after the first game, and the Anti-G racing class has changed from F3600 to F5000. New courses have been built, and the racing teams have all designed new ships. New weapons have been created and the rules have been changed to increase the risks. New teams have entered the races, pushing the number of racers up from 8 to 12 at a time. As well as all of this, the graphics of the game have been improved - the ships leave incredible light trails behind them, and the flares from exploding opponents look incredible! It seems as though one of the greatest games ever has actually been improved on!

KICKIN' TRACKS!

The original Wipeout had six regular tracks, plus one extra, revealed when the second racing class was mastered. Wipeout 2097 uses a different system: two tracks for each of the three classes - Vector, Venom and Rapier, plus an extra class when all three are mastered. This means that there are different difficulties of track as well as racing speeds so that everyone from total beginners to experts can play straight away. The tracks all look incredible and are more imaginative than in the first game - one is floating high in the air, supported by hovering aeroplanes!

PRESENTATION HEADING

Once again, the Designers Republic have designed all the logos for the game, meaning that it looks as cool as the original Wipeout. Also, the option screens have all been redesigned to make them both easier to use and more pleasant to look at. The loading screens have also been made more interesting, though they won't be needed so much, seeing as the loading times have been greatly reduced!

FEELING ALL DIFFERENT INSIDE

The overall feel of Wipeout 2097 is slightly different from the original game. Seeing as the racing class has changed from F3600 to F5000, the handling of the ships has changed for a start. They now respond quicker, meaning that they are still totally controllable even at the highest speeds.

IT'S A TEAM GAME

The four teams from the first game return - AG Systems, Auricom, Qirex and FEISAR - each with new ship designs. Before, the teams all had very similar craft, but now they've each got a different look as well as different handling styles. There is also going to be a hidden team to compete against and eventually play as!

WE'RE TAKING DAMAGE!

Another addition to the rules of Anti-G racing is that racers can be destroyed! The weapons now become a more important part of the game than before, as repeated hits don't just mean lost seconds - they can mean the instant end of a race! Because of this a pit lane has been added, similar to that in F-Zero. Ships need to be piloted along the lane, and are recharged on the move so that only a few seconds are lost.

WEAPONS HEADING

Seeing as it's now possible to destroy enemies, as well as be destroyed yourself, the power-ups are more important than in F3600. There are now 11 items to be picked up - 6 new, plus 5 upgraded originals.

MISSILE

A heat-seeking missile which has a new locking sight.

ROCKET

Three straight rockets are fired at once.

MINE

Five floating mines are dropped in a row.

TURBO

Launches the ship to incredible speeds for a few seconds.

SHIELD

A blue shield stopping all damage, as well as disabling all other weapons for 5 seconds.

NEW!!!

ELECTROBOLT

Similar to the old Shockwave, this reduces control as well as sapping energy.

THUNDER BOMB

A bomb which causes a large explosion, damaging all visible ships.

QUAKE

Sends a giant ripple along the track, accompanied by a row of flames!

PLASMA BOLT

The most powerful weapon. Takes a second to charge, the fires straight ahead.

AUTOPILOT

Takes control of the ship for 5 seconds. Best used at really tricky points.

EMERGENCY E-PAK

Recharges the ship's energy without needing a pit stop.

KICKIN' IN THE BEAT! WOOW!

One of the things that gave the original Wipeout game such a good atmosphere was the awesome techno soundtrack featuring famous artists. This time, Psygnosis is including a soundtrack comprising totally of real performers. As yet, it hasn't been confirmed who's appearing on it, though the Chemical Brothers have already been approached.

NEXT MONTH.... INTO THE FUTURE!

The development of Wipeout 2007 is coming along very quickly, so we should have an update next issue as we look forward to reviewing the finished game!

NEW GAMES

We said it was coming. But how soon and how fast, we had no idea! The Fighting Vipers conversion machine is on the move!!

FORMAT: SATURN
BY: AM2
DUE: OCTOBER (JAPAN)

It was just after we went to press last month that the first pictures of Fighting Vipers arrived! What's incredible, is that in the month it's taken us to get them to you, more and more have surfaced. And on each occasion, astonishing developments have been made. Then - it happened! At the Tokyo Toy Fair on the first week of June, a playable version of the game was revealed! What you see here is everything we've got, from the first shots to Toy Fair demo stills. It may look basic now, but in a few short months this game is going to be unbelievable! We've seen it happen before!!

THE FIGHTING VIPERS

Already, six of the nine vipers have been revealed! Notably, the only two main characters missing (the third is the boss, BM) are Picky and Raxel, both characters that use weapons - a skateboard and guitar respectively. At this early stage, the fighters still look quite basic. However, while increasing the level of detail, AM2 are taking a different approach to the character design than they did with VF2.

"If the Saturn version was identical to the arcade, on a home TV the effect would look a little messy," explains Hiroshi Kataoka, the man in charge of AM2's Saturn FV conversion. "Instead of trying to incorporate every single likeness, we'll use the detail effectively and not go overboard. Nobody will mind if Tokio's armour is a little different, but if the face isn't reproduced perfectly the players won't be happy." It's this factor that AM2 consider the most important. "Arcade Vipers makes much more use of the Model 2 board than VF2, in so much as FV uses many more polygons for the face. At the moment we're working on adding this aspect into the game," continues Mr Kataoka. Other factors, such as character animation seem to be causing no problem. "Both the women's bouncing breasts and Bahn's fluttering tailcoat will be accurately reproduced."

JANE

Rockhard girl Jane, already looks to be in an advanced stage of development.

TOKIO

GRACE

The on-screen indicators are already in place! Is there a transparency effect?

SANMAN

Remember, there's more detail under the armour, waiting to be uncovered.

SANMAN

STAGE 5

47'56

Kooargh! Now that's what we call collision detection!

AMAZING LIGHTING EFFECTS!

If there was any one feature missing from Saturn VF2, it was light-sourcing. Not so with Fighting Vipers. Even the earliest shots demonstrate shadows on the characters' limbs, most effectively on uplit stages like Grace's. However, recent pictures have shown even more graphical advancements, including gourard shading! This technique smooths out rough edges caused by polygon shading, resulting in realistic curved 3D shapes! "It's often said that the Saturn isn't able to handle the calculation management of light-sourcing for computer characters, and that if a lot of gourard shading is used, Saturn will grind to a halt." Laughs Mr Kataoka, "we want to show everyone that Saturn can handle both of them perfectly."

Here's a good demonstration of light-sourcing. The shadows give a strong 3D feel. Hur hur.

With gourard shading, the edges are blended to brilliant effect! Much softer looking. Parp.

THE WALL! THE WALL! THE WALL! THE WALL!

The single feature that makes FV unique among fighting games is 'The Wall'. Each ring is surrounded by an enclosure, which can be used to the fighters' advantage - springing off, climbing up, or smashing opponents into it! The most impressive sight in the game, is to finish a contender by smacking them through the wall, right into the background scenery!! Clearly the wall - or more importantly, the interaction with it - was going to be the most difficult part of game to replicate. And after the lack of fencing around Wolf's arena on Saturn VF2, there were rumours the fence might not be included. "Actually the walls are already finished!"

says Mr Kataoka. "It's still necessary to do a little more finishing work on them. It's not just the characters that have texture-mapping. The walls also have texture mapping by creating polygons and applying them to the surface. For example, Bahn's western stage wall will look much better when the textured surface is added. All the extra work of adding the texture-mapping has slowed down development and the completion deadline has had to be pushed back, so we won't be able to include the walls in time for the Tokyo Toy Fair." However, at the Toy Fair, the walls WERE included. Moreover, they were destructible too! It seems AM2 are well on schedule!

THE WALLS ARE ALREADY IN THE GAME!!

So far the walls are looking awesome. Can AM2 replicate the glass lift as effectively?

It looks as if the backdrops are flat scenes, moving in tandem with the foreground. Just as they were in Saturn VF2.

How AM2 cope with switching the walls on and off, as the camera zooms and pans around, remains to be seen.

NEXT MONTH ... SNAKEBITE!

Saturn Fighting Vipers is going to be increeeedible! Other plans for it even include an advanced Version 1.1 not even released in the arcades yet. More next month, that's a promise.

The Tokyo Toy Fair. And look, the game is being played! By real people! Okay, that last bit's not so amazing. But this bit is - look at that screen above. The game is already 50% complete! October folks!!

NEW GAMES PILOTWINGS 64

Look no further than PilotWings 64 to convey the awesome power of Nintendo 64. Combining the expertise of the world's leading audio/visual simulation company, with the magic of a timeless Nintendo game.

As PilotWings 64 is so special, there's none better to talk you through it than the game's creators. This month CVG has comments from Dave Gatchel, Paradigm Simulation's VP of Entertainment Systems, exclusively for readers of CVG. In addition, the main screen-shots used in this feature were taken especially for CVG by the engineers at Paradigm. Before we hand over to Dave Gatchel, we would like to point out why PilotWings 64 is so significant - not just to N64, but for its effect on video games PERIOD.

↑ Remember the secret cavern that was talked about in last month's E3 report. Well this is the stage that it is found! Somewhere near here is a tiny cave which leads Kiwi to his prize.

ASTRONOMICAL

The original PilotWings has sold over two million copies worldwide. Few games have ever come close to that scale of recognition. Just like the N64 game, that first PilotWings was one of the games to be launched with the Super Famicom (Super NES) in Japan in December 1990. While Super Mario World provided players with the game they had been waiting for, and more, PilotWings offered something sensational because it was so different. Moreover, the Super Famicom game showcased the unique advantages of Nintendo's latest hardware. You couldn't do anything quite like Mode 7 on any other system. Likewise PilotWings 64 completely revolutionises the way you expect a video game to play, while hammering home the message that no other home system can equal this kind of performance. No exaggeration.

⬆ The character known as Kiwi, viewed from behind so the player can appreciate the view. By pressing the shoulder buttons, the perspective can be changed.

⬆ Chill wind blowing through the mountains causes havoc with the handling of the gyrocopter. This player is low on fuel too. Only the most skilled can progress.

⬆ The gyrocopter instructor's name is Goose – he's the blonde-haired guy across the page. This scene looks pretty desolate, apart from those water falls. Could be hiding something...

⬆ Birdman is able to fly anywhere he likes, without fear of time limit or penalties for touching the ground. The only way to get him is to complete every task with honours.

⬆ With care it's possible to manoeuvre the 'copter down this rocky channel, with the objective of scoring big points for skill. Note the subtlety of colour in the water.

NEW GAMES

PARADIGM PRESENTS

Since work began early last year, Dave Gatchel has worked closely with Shigeru Miyamoto to ensure PilotWings 64 fulfils a world full of high expectations. Few people have been closer to the development of this special game than Mr Gatchel, which is why we feel honoured to have him present the finished game to you.

HOW IS EACH VEHICLE CONTROLLED?

"There are three vehicles: hang glider, gyrocopter and rocket pack. Each vehicle is based on an extremely realistic physics model (with some minor concessions for fun!). All the vehicles take full advantage of the new Nintendo 64 controller, and in particular the controller's analogue joystick. Additionally, the controller gives the player the ability to explore 3D worlds by changing the eyepoint position and the direction of view.

"For all vehicles, the right shoulder button switches from first person to trailing observer viewpoints. The D-pad buttons change the direction the character looks, but without affecting the travel direction. The hang glider is controlled by the joystick alone, with the Z-button (trigger) used to take photographs. The gyrocopter uses the joystick for controlling the direction, the A and B buttons to change engine speed, and the Z-button to fire missiles. The rocket pack uses the joystick for controlling direction, the A and B buttons for two different levels of thrust, and the Z button for hovering."

After clearing each floating ring, hang glider pilots must gauge their approach to the landing area perfectly.

Hawk, the hang glider instructor. And darling Ibis.

During training you get to stay in a hotel, where there is a Golf Course, Amusement Fair, and an Island. And of course you get to examine every area in full-blown detail!

As in the first PilotWings, performing 'fly-bys' before landing is a simple skill which must be learned at first. This is a great opportunity to admire the detail below.

VARIOUS MISSION OBJECTIVES

"The objectives of each mission varies based on vehicle type, and the objectives get more difficult with each successive level of certification. There are numerous basic tasks including flying for distance with the hang glider — testing the player's ability to use the wind thermals to provide lift to gain extra altitude; flying for accuracy with all three of the vehicles as the player passes through stationary and moving targets such as rings and balls; or even shooting accuracy with the missiles available on the gyrocopter.

"We are very excited about the entire game! There are lots of factors that make the gameplay interesting and will make gamers want to play it again and again. First, the sensation of flying — the most basic concept of the PilotWings game, with a different, realistic feel to each of the vehicles. There is also a very beautiful environment for the gamer to explore. That is perhaps one of the more unique aspects of the game — the player has the option to complete the basic task for the level or to continue and explore as they wish — there are no limitations other than the player's skill, and the amount of fuel left!"

Say "Yoiks!" to Mecha-Hawk — who must be stopped by missiles!

The writing says "Ring Clear". And there's home-base. Yippee!

Obtain Gold in each area to be rewarded with an Extra Game!

DESCRIBING THE BONUS ROUNDS

"There are several bonus rounds. The player gets to each bonus round by successfully completing the basic tasks of "certification" for each vehicle. Each of the bonus rounds takes place within the terrain of the existing game, providing the player another opportunity to see the world of PilotWings 64."

↑ "The first bonus level is the human cannonball. The objective is to aim the cannon at the bullseye target, taking into account the available power level and prevailing winds."

↑ "After the second level of certification, the player goes skydiving, where the objective is two-part. First, the player must link up information with the other skydiving characters in as many different formations as possible before entering the clouds. After passing through the cloud layer, the player must then successfully land at the proper site, controlling the direction, when the parachute is deployed, and the rate of descent - all while being graded on landing accuracy!"

→ "The ultimate bonus is "birdman" - fulfilling that childhood fantasy of strapping wings to your arms and being able to fly like a bird. The only way to get to this level is to complete all the tasks with high proficiency. The reward is total freedom to explore the PilotWings 64 world!"

"A third bonus round is the jumlehopper, where the character dons a pair of incredible spring boots. The objective is to travel over land to the target area by controlling the direction and power of each jump, and to do so within a reasonable amount of time."

↑ C'mon! You have never EVER seen a landscape look so perfect and realistic as this in a video game. The lighting is so natural. The water is so incredibly true to life. Amazing!

↑ Pilots may fly up close to that liner below, where they discover that it bears the Paradigm logo.

↑ ...3...2...1... BLAST OFF! Yep, this Space Shuttle takes off in a plume of smoke as you watch!

Thanks to Melinda, Amy, and, of course, Dave Gatchel at Paradigm for their kind assistance.

NEW GAMES

Each month it seems CVG is presented with every new game in development, for coverage 'somewhere' in the magazine. So we have created these pages especially so we can show you as much new stuff as we possibly can. If there are any games you'd especially like us to chase, don't hesitate to drop us a line!

STREET FIGHTER ALPHA 2

FORMAT: SATURN, PLAYSTATION, SNES

BY: CAPCOM

DUE: TBC (JULY/AUGUST JAPAN)

It's no surprise that SFA2 is coming to Saturn and PlayStation. Capcom even had a 90% version of the game running on those systems at the Tokyo Toy Show. Once again Capcom promise a faithful port of the original arcade game. However, due to the increased number of characters and backgrounds, the animation frames have been slightly reduced for the home versions. It's not certain whether secret characters Evil Ryu, original Dhalsim and Zangief are to be included, as these are all Capcom of America additions. We'll keep you updated on that concern. Of course, most of these worries are all by the way for Super NES owners, who are also preparing for their interpretation. Everything will be reduced in some way or another for the 16-bit SFA2, excepting the full compliment of awesome moves. Plus, being cartridge based, Super NES SFA2 won't suffer from loading problems. Let's hope somebody licenses this funky version for the UK.

➤ The gameplay is definitely 100% there!

➤ These screenshots are from the 32-bit versions.

DEAD OR ALIVE

FORMAT: ARCADE (LATER SATURN)

BY: TECMO

DUE: AUGUST

One of the first games to benefit from Sega having licensed out their Model 2 technology. Dead or Alive looks very similar to Virtua Fighter 2 but the gameplay is 100% Tecmo's own, and therefore altogether very different. The key to Tecmo's game is that guarding is achieved through the joystick, exchanging the 'block' function of the third button to 'hold'. Introducing throws to the combat enables Dead or Alive to come into its own, and there are two types available: Type A counters an enemy's strike, and hits high, middle or low depending on the joystick position; Type B goes on the offensive, grabbing an opponent in order to follow with a closed-range attack. However not all characters can grab an opponent who's squatting. Instead of Ring Outs, DoA has a Danger Zone – explosive compounds, or traps are installed in the parameter of the fighting ring. Needless to say, any fighter who's forced into the Danger Zone suffers a lot of pain. Weakened opponents who find themselves at the mercy of the Danger Zone may even lose their life – hence the name of the game. Martial artists and at least one famous Japanese actor were motion captured for use in the development of DoA. The advanced techniques used there enable Tecmo to introduce an element of unbalance to fighters who miss an attack – in some cases you might even see a character fall flat on their face! We're looking forward to testing the innovative features of DoA as soon as possible. Especially since there is every chance of a Saturn version before the end of the year.

➤ The shading and detail of this player is absolutely fantastic!

KEN GRIFFEY JR BASEBALL

FORMAT: NINTENDO 64

BY: ANGEL STUDIOS

DUE: SEPTEMBER

First development screenshot of the most advanced Baseball sim ever created! Apologies for the black and white pic, but this is all that is currently available from Angel Studios, under the current Nintendo restrictions. Touted as "one the first true physically-based 3D real-time sports games", the project is benefiting greatly from Angel Studios' flexible skin projection technology, and motion capture expertise. The result so far is what you see here – a beautifully rendered baseball character, whose signature movements are based on those of Seattle Mariners' baseball superstar Ken Griffey, Jr. To achieve this high standard of motion capture, Angel Studios has worked for over a year with a company called Polhemus, and successfully developed "the most effective magnetic motion capture system available." Instead of relying solely on key frame animations, this system is so advanced that it can record "organic human movement" for unparalleled realism. With Angel Studios' flair for the fantastic, this game ought to be a spectacular debut for Ken Griffey Jr on Nintendo 64 later this year.

BLAST CHAMBER

FORMAT: PLAYSTATION, SATURN, PC
BY: ACTIVISION
DUE: 4TH QUARTER

One of the games that stood out from the crowd at E3. The premise is really simple: four players enter a complex maze with a bomb strapped to their back. Only way they can prevent these from going off is to grab hold of a pulsing crystal, and slam it into a transmitter. Also consider that – in addition to the obstacles posed by stairs, ropes, and catwalks – players may also ROTATE THE ENTIRE CHAMBER for strategic advantage. In multi-player mode there are 20 varied rooms, and that number is doubled for the one-player competition. As you can appreciate, the game has great visual style. It's also truly original, and very addictive. We hope to bring you much more on this great innovative title soon.

HYPERBLADE

FORMAT: PC CD-ROM
BY: WIZBANG!/ACTIVISION
DUE: 4TH QUARTER

On the surface, a stunning visual representation of a futuristic hockey game. At its core a revolutionary new Artificial Intelligence engine called ADLIB (Advanced Declarative Language for Interactive Behaviour). All in all, Activision's vision of future sport is set to be a major event for sports fans equipped with PC CD-ROM later this year. Hyperblade is a team game which blends roller-ball, hockey, and lacrosse. Instead of a ball you have a Jok, which is tossed from player to player, and hopefully into the opponent's goal, using Jaks. This exciting scenario takes place in a 3D half-pipe drome, with the viewpoint tracking players nearest to, or in possession of the Jok. Rules are pretty slack, so it's okay to get as aggressive as you like. With Q-Sound enhancing an already mind blowing atmosphere, it's hard to believe Hyperblade won't cause a small riot when it's released.

FINAL DOOM

FORMAT: PC
BY: ID/GT INTERACTIVE
DUE: JULY

Craving for more Doom? Can't wait for Quake? Final Doom comprises of another two episodes, following on from the end of Doom 2. The twist is that these levels weren't designed by id software, they were made by fanatical WAD builders. As you may know, Doom was made so that it was possible for players to create their own levels (WADs), and there are loads available on the Internet. What id did was find the best, offer advice to their designers, and compile them into new episodes! Though there are no new monsters, these are still 32 of the best levels available, and promise to satisfy even the most hardcore Doomers.

THREE DIRTY DWARVES

BY: SEGA
DUE: AUGUST

Three Orc dwarves have been summoned from a game of Dungeons and Dragons and dumped in the middle of New York, along with loads of other monsters who've followed them. There are lots of different styles in the game – some levels are scrolling beat 'em ups, some are into-the-screen shooting games, one involves guiding a wrecking ball into a dragon's face! The characters each have special attacks and weapons – one uses a baseball bat, one a bowling ball, and the other a shotgun (though it's not a very good shotgun). The characters are controlled one at a time in one-player mode, but with an adaptor three people can play at once. It's definitely a very strange idea, and we'll have more on it soon.

NBA ACTION

FORMAT: SATURN.
BY: SEGA
DUE: AUGUST

Flyers for NBA Action have been given to Saturn owners for the last few months, but until now nothing much has been seen of it. It's another basketball game with 3D graphics and an official licence, only this time it's got what every basketball fan wants – a Marv Albert commentary! Photographs of the real NBA players have been mapped onto the faces of the players to make them look more life-like, an effect that works well. The play is also faster than many basketball games, and the players are easily controllable, with spins and other tricks. NBA Action may not look quite as fancy as Total NBA, but it sure seems to play better. More coverage soon.

DESTRUCTION DERBY 2

FORMAT: PLAYSTATION, PC CD-ROM
BY: PSYGNOSIS
DUE: NOVEMBER

Though the first Destruction Derby isn't particularly brilliant, it is still good fun and has done very well in terms of sales. The sequel looks set to improve on the first game in every area – not least the graphics. The cars can now roll and flip over when hit, making for far more spectacular crashes. Also, the damage on the cars is more obvious, as bonnets and other parts fall off, as well as the whole occasionally catching fire! The race tracks are banked, with hills to launch the cars into the air, and there are now at least seven separate tracks and four different bowls! There was a very early version playable at the E3 last month, which showed off the graphics and the speed – this has the potential to be very good.

24 "HEURES" AT LE MANS

We all love cars at CVG. Big, fast, expensive racing ones are best, and we know everything about em thanks to little Tommy G's prize collection of racing top trumps! So when Dave Kelsall blagged a top trip to see the 24 heures LE MANS courtesy of EA we were flinkin' jealous! He's only supposed to write the 'old games' bit, isn't he?

Le Mans broke with tradition this year and started the race at 3.00pm instead of 4.00pm. The reason was Euro '96! They'd even got huge Screens around the stadium so anyone interested could keep an eye on both events at the same time. After the match the screens came into their own and kept spectators aware of what was happening at other points in the eight mile circuit, and what with in-car shots and dramatic camera angles it was just like watching a flinkin' computer game!

Though most spectators hang around the main stadium, it's also possible to visit the famous five corners to really witness the drivers' skills. Muslanne is the most popular in the eight-mile circuit with drivers having to brake hard from a speedy straight into a tight 90° corner, and then flat out again before Indianapolis. At night you can even see the brakes getting red hot, with a small burst of flames from the exhaust as they begin to power back up.

There are various classes of car at LE MANS with each one having its particular strengths and weaknesses. The sports prototypes for example can take the curves faster, while the GT's (McLaren, Dodge Viper) are quicker along the straights and need less fuel so will spend less time in the pits. (Wow, just like my Top Trumps - Tom).

A lot of people decide to stay at the circuit throughout the night. Needless to say the action doesn't let up for one minute especially with the famous LE MANS fair and the Piste Alain Prost kart circuit on offer if the racing begins to get a bit too much!

On Sunday morning I noticed that the night had taken its toll on a lot of the cars. Most were covered in bits of road tar and rubber with various body panels being held together with industrial sticky tape. The British Newcastle United car in particular was looking unlikely to finish but managed to limp

(TOP) Here's me standing next to some ugly ape in a blue shirt.

(ABOVE) Bonjour, we'd just like to say 'allo' to all you CVG readers out there in England. Oul!

(LEFT) Lishen mate...hic... I'm only asking 10 pence for a cup of tea... hic...it needs a clean. Bleeeeeurg!
(BELOW) The Newcastle United car was on its last legs but finished the race to a massive applaud by the British racing fans.

(BELOW) The Harrods car screams through a bend.

(TOP) Tiff Needell laps up the champers being showered from above. Well...it looked like champagne.

(BELOW) Engine 2.8 single turbo. Power 600bhp-plus. Yeeees, I've won, isn't Top Trumps ace.

(LEFT) Most people watch the racing from this stadium. You get to see the cars tearing down the straight and limping into the pit lanes.

Thanks to Nick, David and everyone at EA for letting Dave out for the weekend!
